THE GREAT STRUGGLE.

Reported Flight of the Prince Imperial to London.

Jewels and Valuables of the Empress Also Sent.

Magnitude of the Victories Won by the Prussians.

Their Pickets Within Gunshot of Metz.

Communication With Strasbourg Cut Off.

Another Exciting Session of the French Chambers.

THE NEW MINISTRY ANNOUNCED.

French Accounts of the Valor of Their Troops.

Napoleon Will Return to Paris "Dead or Victorious."

The British Parliament on the Belgian Question.

IMPORTANT RUMOR.

The Prince Imperial in London—Removal of the Empress' Jewels and Valuables to the British Capital.

LONDON, Aug. 10.—The Prince Imperial of France has arrived in London, and is now at the French Legation in charge of W. F. SMITH, the Emperor's confidential agent. Mr. SMITH also brought with him the Empress EUGENIE's jewels and valuables and the famous diamonds of the Duke of BRUNSWICK.

A FRENCH DENIAL OF THE STORY.

PARIS, Aug. 10.—Contrary to all previous reports received here, (Paris,) it is now stated that the Prince Imperial is still at Metz.

FROM THE FIELD.

Official Accounts of Recent Operations from Berlin—Magnitude of the Result.

LONDON, Aug. 10.—The Prussians, as they advance, discover that the losses of the French in the recent battles must have been frightful, exceeding even the most extravagant estimates.

THE RESULT AT SAARBRUCK.

BERLIN, Aug. 10—11 A. M.—Official dispatches from the army head-quarters state that the results of the battle at Saarbrück on Saturday were more important than was first supposed. FROSSARD's Corps was dispersed. The entire camp of one division and many magazines were captured; prisoners by thousands were taken, and the number is hourly increasing. The French losses must have been immense.

DISAPPEARANCE OF THE FRENCH.

Their forces have disappeared from all points in our front, and none are to be seen by our patrols, who are within gunshot of Metz.

Connection with Strasbourg Broken—McMahon Intrenching at Saverne—Movements of the Crown Prince—Prussians on the Saar.

LONDON, Aug. 10.—A dispatch received from Haguenau, today, states that the connection between Saverne and Strasbourg has been broken. MCMAHON is intrenching at Saverne, and the Crown Prince of Prussia is believed to be hurrying to cut off that place from Nancy. The weather is wet and unfavorable for military operations.

PRUSSIANS MASSING ON THE SAAR.

The French Army has concentrated. The Prussian Army is massing on the Saar. Marshal BAZAINE is the Commander-in-Chief of the French Army, LEBOEUF having retired.

THE DEFENSE AT METZ.

Houses, trees, and all obstructions within 5,000 yards of the fortifications of Metz have been destroyed.

McMahon's Staff All Killed or Wounded—Other French Officers Lost—Strasbourg.

PARIS, Aug. 10.—La Liberté says that all the members of the Staff of Marshal MCMAHON were either killed or wounded in the battle of Froschweiler. Col. GRAMMONT, brother of the Minister of Foreign Affairs, lost an arm. Col. ABZAC was mortally wounded. Col. ESPENIELLES, Aid-de-Camp to the Prince Imperial, has disappeared. Count VOGUE SEPTEND and others were among the killed. The Seventy-fourth Regiment of the line lost at Wissenbourg forty-eight officers killed and wounded.

QUIET AT STRASBOURG.

STRASBOURG, Aug. 10—9½ P. M.—All is quiet here, but defensive measures are continued.

French Losses in Saturday's Fights—The Emperor's Incapacity—The Retreat—Edmond About Missing—Changarnier—Concentration Toward Paris.

LONDON, Aug. 10.—The result of Saturday's fighting is generally attributed to the Emperor's military incapacity. The Prussian advance is obstructed by villages filled with French wounded. The French losses exceed all estimates. The Prussians took multitudes of prisoners. Of the Seventy-seventh Regiment of the line, engaged at Saarbrück, only eighty men and four officers reported after the fight.

THE RETREAT.

It is said that after the battle of the 6th, the French abandoned their works in the greatest confusion. An ineffectual effort was made to check the Prussian advance at Niederbrun, which place was taken by the Bavarians. The French continued to retreat toward Bitsche, the Wurtemberg Cavalry picking up scores of prisoners. The line of retreat was covered with dead and wounded. The Prussians entered Haguenau early on the 7th, and soon after occupied Forbach and Saargemund.

EDMOND ABOUT is reported as missing for two days past.

Both armies were quiet yesterday.

CHANGARNIER AND OTHER OFFICERS.

Gen. CHANGARNIER's interview with the Emperor is said to have been very satisfactory.

KING WILLIAM is at Kaiserlautern. Gen. DUMONT will take command of a division of the French army. The Duc D' AUMALE has offered his services to the Emperor. The French continue concentrating on the road to Paris. All that region is in a state of siege.

Accounts of Returning French Correspondents—Valor of their Troops—A Chaplain Killed—Changarnier Employed.

PARIS, Aug. 10.—A number of the French newspaper correspondents who were supposed to have been captured, and who arrived today, are wounded. In the accounts they give of the battles, they testify to the wonderful bravery of the French troops, and particularly those of the African Corps, who fought for eight hours incessantly against overpowering odds.

A CHAPLAIN KILLED.

Abbé BUVRON, Chaplain of the Corps of Marshal MCMAHON, was killed in the battle of Woerth while helping the wounded.

ABOUT HEARD FROM.

The correspondent of the Univers, who went to the front, is missing. EDMOND ABOUT, correspondent of the Soir, has been heard from, and is supposed to be safe.

CHANGARNIER ON THE GENERAL STAFF.

An official dispatch from Metz, timed at 8½ this morning, says: "This morning the Emperor has gone to visit the cantonments of the army. The ardor and enthusiasm of the soldiers hourly increases, and the signal for battle is eagerly awaited. Gen. CHANGARNIER has been placed on the general staff, and his presence has an excellent effect."

PARIS.

Proceedings in the Legislative Body—Everything for Defense Voted—Formation of the New Cabinet.

PARIS, Aug. 10.—In the Corps Legislatiff today, the project of Deputy KERATRY for the calling under arms of all unmarried men of the classes of 1859 to 1864 inclusive, was extended to embrace men from the ages of twenty-five to thirty-five who are not married, and not already members of the Garde Mobile. Projects for armament were presented by the Government, and adopted, with the addition of the proposition offered by Deputy KERATRY, as previously amended, and with a further special article, voting the thanks of the Corps Legislatif to the army, which merits much from the nation. A credit of 4,000,000 francs for the families of the Mobile Garde was increased to 25,000,000.

A STAY LAW.

Deputy CREMIEUX submitted a proposition that commercial contracts falling due between the present date and the 30th of August be prolonged for one month. JULES BRAME protested against the measure, and CREMIEUX and JULES SIMON insisted upon its necessity, saying that to defend the country the mind must be free of care. The project was voted as urgent.

THRONGS OUTSIDE.

Circulation around the hall outside was by this time stopped by the crowds, and several detachments of troops surrounded the building. The masses, however, were not disorderly.

NATIONAL DEFENSE.

The project of law for the national defense was adopted unanimously by 273 votes, amid prolonged applause. In the excitement a voice was heard: "Now let Prussia look us in the face!"

THE NEW MINISTRY.

Gen. Count PALIKAO announced the formation of the new Ministry, and read a list of the names, as follows:

Minister of War—Count Palikao.
Minister of Foreign Affairs—De la Tour d' Auvergne.
Minister of the Interior—Henri Chevreau.
Minister of Justice—Grandperret.
Minister of the Marine—De Genouilly.
Minister of Finances—Pierre Magne.
Minister of Public Works—Jerome David.
Minister of Public Instruction—Jules Brame.
Minister of Commerce—Clement Duvernois.
President of the Council of State—Busson-Billault.

THE GARDE NATIONALE.

A recess was taken for a quarter of an hour. On resuming, the Chamber desired to pass immediately to the discussion of the project of law on the Garde Nationale. M. BUFFET requested a delay of two hours, as the report on the subject was not quite ready. The Minister of the Marine demanded an adjournment. He explained that Count PALIKAO was now in the Senate, and could not assist at proceedings in which his advice was needed. M. ARAGO protested against a postponement. Minister BUSSON-BILLAULT demanded an adjournment of the question until to-morrow. Deputy GAMBETTA insisted that the debate should proceed. France, he said, wanted arms. The soil of the country was invaded. The necessity for instant action was imperative. The Government should have made up its mind. [Great sensation.] Minister JEROME DAVID requested that the Ministry have a few hours for reflection.

The Situation at the French Capital—Anticipated Dictatorship—The Emperor Invited to Return—Republicans Denounced as Allies of Prussia—Military Order.

PARIS, Aug. 10.—A dictatorship is anticipated, with Gen. TROCHU acting as supreme head. The Emperor has been invited to return to Paris and await the reconstruction of the Government. His refusal is considered certain.

UNPOPULARITY OF THE CASSAGNACS.

After the adjournment of the Corps Legislatif, yesterday, the crowd, whose feelings had been wrought up to a pitch of fury, went to the residence of GRANIER DE CASSAGNAC, and made threatening demonstrations. M. DE CASSAGNAC, warned of the danger, fled to the house of his son, and the mob not finding their intended victim, dispersed. Le Pays, CASSAGNAC's journal, today denounces the Republicans as allies of Prussia. PAUL DE CASSAGNAC publishes a letter to the Prefect of Police, stating that M. LISSAGARAY, who was condemned to twelve months' imprisonment, and who fled to Brussels to escape punishment, has returned to Paris, and last night was at the head of the mob which wanted to hang his father, M. DE GRANIER DE CASSAGNAC.

THE MILITARY SPIRIT RISING.

The military spirit and enthusiasm is increasing throughout France. Large crowds of people are assembled in various quarters of the city, but the utmost good order prevails....The ladies of Paris have issued an address, in which they make a stirring appeal to all for aid to the society for the wounded.

AFFAIRS IN PARIS UNCHANGED.

LONDON, Aug. 10.—Paris telegrams of Tuesday afternoon and night, now coming in, do not change the aspect of affairs. It seems to be true that the Emperor, when solicited to return to Paris, replied that he would return dead or victorious.

FIERCE SCENES IN CORPS LEGISLATIF.

La Patrie, describing the scene in the Corps Legislatif, yesterday, says when M. OLLIVIER attempted to speak a second time, Deputies of the Left rushed upon him and would have murdered him had not the members of the Right promptly interposed.

Scenes in Paris—Excitement at the Corps Legislatif and Tuileries—The Gardé Nationale Fraternizing with the People.

LONDON, Aug. 10.—A special dispatch dated Paris, midnight, gives the following account of the scene in and near the Corps Legislatif yesterday: Deputy KERATRY demanded the deposition of the Emperor. He was called to order by the Chair. The Deputies then abandoned the hall and scattered to their committee rooms.

THE SCENES OUTSIDE.

Outside a wild crowd was assembled, and refused to disperse. Bodies of cavalry and lancers were stationed in all the surrounding streets. The court-yard of the Tuileries was thronged with soldiery. Around the hall of the Corps Legislatif the Police repeatedly charged on the mob, but the latter reformed after each charge.

HISTORY REPEATING ITSELF.

Bodies of the National Guard threw down their arms and fraternized with the populace. Other detachments remained passive in their barracks. Marshal BARAGUAY D'HILLIERS organized the troops, and the mob was everywhere charged. The correspondent reports that as he was going to post his dispatches, he heard the sounds of drums and bugles in every direction. Inside the hall of the Corps Legislatif the scene was one of fear and bewilderment.

ARRESTS.

PARIS, Aug. 10.—The Liberté mentions a number of arrests by the Government, including that of GAILLARD, père.

AMERICANS AND ENGLISH LEAVING PARIS.

The Press remains patriotic and the Provinces are united. Americans and English are leaving Paris. Energetic measures are looked for from the new Cabinet.

The Theatres Closed—Respect for the Popular Feeling—Anxiety to Go to the Front—Military Spirit Unbroken.

PARIS, Aug. 10.—Nearly all the theatres were closed last night. It was remarked that the crowds about the city, though enormous, were very quiet. The workshops were generally closed yesterday. All caricatures on war subjects have disappeared from the shop-windows because offensive to the public. The crowds about the kiosks, where newspapers are sold, are enormous, and the people actually fight to get the journals the moment they are issued.

GOING TO THE FRONT.

Gen. MELLINET has asked for a command in the Army of the Rhine. Large numbers of the Garde Mobile are leaving Paris for the army. A detachment went off today amid great cheering from the crowds gathered around the station.

A FLEET SAILED.

The Moniteur today announces that the Mediterranean fleet has sailed from Brest, destination unknown.

MORE MILITARY ARDOR.

A letter from the Camp of Chalons to the Journal Officiel represents that the Garde Mobile is full of military spirit, and anxious to meet the enemy. The Moniteur says the English Embassy here has received advices that the Prussian losses at Wiessenburg were enormous. "So we may hope," continues the Moniteur, "to soon resume the offensive, and cause the enemy to pay still more dearly for his first successes."

Correspondents Returning—Session of the Senate—Journalists Acquitted, and Sentenced to Banishment—The Bullet of the Prince Imperial.

PARIS, Aug. 10.—This morning all the correspondents of Paris journals for whose safety fears had been entertained, arrived in this city from the frontier safe and sound, excepting M. DE KATOW, of the Gaulois, who is still missing.

LEGISLATIVE MATTERS.

The Senate will re-assemble to-day at 9 o'clock, to vote on the proposition made yesterday in the Corps Legislatif. The Corps will discuss projects for the safety of the State. Deputy KERATRY proposes the calling out under arms, and ready to take the field at a moment's warning, of all unmarried men of the military classes of 1858, 1859, 1860, 1861, 1862 and 1863.

PROSECUTIONS OF JOURNALISTS.

A dispatch from Blois says the editors of the Cloche and Marseillaise who were prosecuted on a charge of publishing false statements, have been acquitted. MM. FLOURENS, FRIDON, and others, condemned for contumacy, have been sentenced to be banished from France.

THE PRINCE'S BULLET—A SERIOUS JOKE.

FELIX PYAT, condemned for offering the toast, "La Balle," [double entendre—the ball or the bullet,] is sentenced to five years' imprisonment and to pay a fine of 6,000 francs.

PERSONAL.

M. EMILE OLLIVIER has lived at his private residence during the last three days, instead of occupying the official palace. The Princess CLOTILDE and her children have returned from Mendon to Paris.

OFFICIAL BULLETIN OF OPERATIONS.

The Journal Officiel says no important action has taken place at the front since Saturday. Marshal BAZAINE has made some reconnaissances with cavalry, which have elicited information of the position of the enemy. In one of these movements a squadron of hussars encountered a detachment of Prussian Uhlans and drove them back, killing one officer and wounding another.

BERLIN.

Matters in Berlin—The Opera-House Turned into a Hospital—The Prussian Loan—Denial of the Reported Naval Fight.

BERLIN, Aug. 10.—The Opera-house in this city has been given up to ladies' sewing societies and for hospital purposes. The building is now nearly filled with wounded men.

THE LOAN—THE NEEDLE-GUN.

Bankers decline the Prussian war loan, but the people subscribe for it freely. The Prussian officers and soldiers think lightly of the effectiveness of the mitrailleur, but believe the Chassepot is a better weapon than the needle-gun.

RUMORS DENIED—VOLUNTEER NAVAL FORCE.

All rumors of naval battles heretofore circulated are false.

LONDON, Aug. 10.—Prussia is organizing a volunteer naval force.

THE BELGIAN QUESTION.

Belgian Neutrality in the British Parliament—The Treaty Read—Prorogation—The Queen's Speech Read by Commission.

LONDON, Aug. 10.—The House of Lords was thinly attended today. During the session Lord CAIRNS inquired as to the progress made in the negotiations for the preservation of the neutrality of Belgium. He said the statement that the Government adhered to the treaty of 1839 was satisfactory. The neutrality of Belgium was of serious importance, and he approved the determination of the Government to maintain it. Earl GRANVILLE said he was gratified by the friendly tone of various members, including the noble Lord who preceded him; and in reply, said that the Government had secured the object alluded to, and also the warmest support and approval of Austria and Russia. It was impossible to doubt the personal honor of the Emperor NAPOLEON or King WILLIAM, or that a nation could so forget itself as to make war on the public opinion of the world. He thought the treaty would not require the action of Parliament, the aim desired having been otherwise achieved. The treaty was then read, and loudly cheered. Lord STRATFORD DE REDCLIFFE and the Earl of SHAFTESBURY spoke in terms of approval of the action of the Government, as did Lord REDESDALE and the Duke of CLEVELAND.

PROROGATION—THE QUEEN'S SPEECH.

At 2 o'clock the Royal Commission, the Lord Chancellor, Earl KIMBERLY, Viscount HALIFAX, Viscount SYDNEY and the Marquis of NORMANBY, brought in the Queen's speech. The Commons were summoned, and soon appeared with the speaker, Mr. GLADSTONE, and others at their head. The speech was then read by the Lord Chancellor as follows:

MY LORDS AND GENTLEMEN: The state of public business enables me to release your attendance upon Parliament. I continue to receive from all foreign Powers assurances of their good-will and friendship; but I have witnessed with great pain and grief on both domestic and foreign grounds, the recent outbreak of war between two powerful nations, allied to this country. My best exertions have been used to avert the great calamity. I shall now direct constant and anxious attention to a strict observance of the duties and rights of neutrality. I have cheerfully assented to the measure matured by your wisdom to enlarge the powers of the Executive, not only for the discharge of international duties, but for the prevention of acts injurious to the interest of this country. I shall make every fitting endeavor to check the operation of the causes leading to the enlargement of the area of conflict, and shall contribute, if opportunity offer, to the restoration of an early and honorable peace. I have tendered to the belligerent Powers treaties, identical in form, which will give additional security to Belgium against the hazards of war on her frontier. The treaty has been signed by Count BERNSTOFF for the North German Confederation, and the French Envoy has signified that he has authority to sign the corresponding instrument; and the receipt of full power therefor from the other Powers, parties to the treaty of 1839, has been invited, and they are likely to accede to the engagement. The shocking murders in Greece have produced a painful impression in Europe, and have drawn attention to the serious evils existing in that country. My unremitting efforts will be directed to secure a complete and searching inquiry into the facts. Gentlemen of the House of Commons, I thank you for the liberal provision made by you for the ordinary service of the year, and for the additional supplies of men and money voted in view of the altered circumstances of the Continent. The revenue gives promise to meet the new charges thus created, without revising the proper balances of revenue and expenditure. The act for the repression of agrarian crime and to maintain order in Ireland, has answered its purpose thus far. From the act regulating the occupation of the land I anticipate the restoration of peaceful relations between the landlord and tenant, and of confidence and benevolence. Legislation duly protecting life and property I hope now is more easy, and I rely on the loyalty and affection of my Irish subjects. I have been pleased to concur in the bill for national education in England, a new guarantee for the moral and social well-being of the nation, its prosperity and power. The Naturalization act, and that for the extradition of criminals, tend to strengthen our friendly relations with other Powers. The act regulating enlistments for short terms, I hope will increase the efficiency of the forces, promote the welfare of the soldiers, and provide for the nation a reserve well trained in arms, and ready on the emergency to return to their standards. I bid you farewell for the recess, with the earnest prayer that when again summoned, I may rejoice with you on the re-establishment of peace in Europe.

The outside attendance was small. The prorogation is to Oct. 27. At the conclusion of the formalities the proceedings terminated.

THE ROUTE TO PARIS.

Development of the Prussian Plan of the Campaign—The Present Compared with Previous Invasions.

In the absence of any movements from the seat of war, save what are indicative of the pursuance of plans which we have already explained, it may not be uninteresting to advert to the probable course of a march to Paris, for which the Prussians are evidently preparing. When the frontier was first violated twelve days ago, a writer in the Opinion Nationale directed attention to the fact that the invasion of France by the Prussians in 1792, and that by the Allies in 1813, had consistently followed the same plan of advance—a plan which in both cases originated with the Major-General of the Prussian forces. On these occasions an entrance was made by the valley of the Moselle. Metz and Thionville were avoided, and Verdun and Longevy having been captured, a descent was made by the valley of the Meuse, whence the valley of the Marne was gained, leading by Chalons straight on to Paris. Following the indications of the writer we have quoted, we may calculate with tolerable certainty, that should the main body of the Prussian troops prove victorious before Metz the valley of the Marne will be again selected as the route to Paris. On the prospects of another advance being made from the south, additional data are wanting to warrant any further speculation.

Presuming, then, that in the great battle at Metz, which becomes daily more imminent, the French Army should be so thoroughly defeated as to leave that fortress open to the invaders or to warrant them in leaving it behind, they would doubtless proceed to take possession of the important railroad centre of Frouard, a point about twenty miles south of Metz, where the lines cross which lead to that fortress on the north, to Strasbourg on the east, and to Paris on the west. Communication between eastern France and the capital would thus be thoroughly cut off, and the large stores of railroad material deposited there would become the spoil of the victors. Nancy is but a few miles distant, and another battle there might be expected to precede the further advance to Paris. Following the valley of the Moselle for ten miles the invaders would have to deal with the fortress of Toul—a place, however, only of the second rank. Between this and the valley of the Marne is a distance of thirty to forty miles, across a hilly tract of country, where the movements of heavy bodies of troops would be necessarily slow, and where the mining of a few viaducts would effectually prevent the possibility of using the railroad. Once arrived at St. Dizier, on the Marne, the only remaining exterior defense of Paris is Chalons, at a distance of about thirty miles, and it is not at all improbable that around the intrenched camp here may be fought one of the greatest and most desperate battles of the present century.

Of course a French defeat at Metz is the indispensable preliminary to all such probabilities; but from the overwhelming amount of force which the Prussians can bring against the position, such an event cannot be considered as at all unlikely. It is one of the first principles of Prussian tactics to strike heavily and swiftly. The construction of their armies out of men drawn from peaceful avocations renders a long campaign a thing to be avoided. The rapidity and certainty of their movements thus far amply demonstrate that their plans have been fully matured, and warrant us in expecting a similar amount of expedition in their further advance. If proof were wanting of their decision and activity, it will be found in the statement contained in this morning's dispatches that the Crown Prince was hastening to cut off the connection which MCMAHON, at Saverne, holds with CANROBERT at Nancy. It is scarcely conceivable that this manœuvre should be permitted without another collision between the two armies. If a battle is fought at all, it will probably be near Saarburg, about twelve miles further west, on the railroad to Nancy. It is quite possible that the Marshal may elect to retire upon the valley of the Moselle at the last named place, in which case the passes of the Vosges will be in undisputed possession of the Prussians, and Strasbourg will be left entirely beyond the reach of support.

WAR NOTES.

It is stated that King WILLIAM's speech to the North German Parliament was drawn up by Count BISMARCK, and that the King himself and the Crown Prince made some additions to the original draft before the speech was delivered.

An explanation is given of the violation of Luxemburg neutrality reported yesterday from Treves. All that happened, it seems, was the purchase of tobacco and sugar at Schengen by some French soldiers who had crossed the Moselle without arms.

A correspondent of the Indépendance Belge states that the inhabitants of the little town of Osterode have offered a reward of 10,000 thalers to whoever shall take the Emperor of the French, dead or alive.

Among the young men who have just left Paris to be trained in the Garde Mobile are two sons of M. JULES SIMON; the one to serve in the ranks; the other, a medical student, as assistant surgeon.

The American Legion, to which we alluded some days ago, says Galignani's Messenger of July 29, has definitely obtained leave to organize itself. It will be 500 strong, all Americans except the Commander-in-Chief, who will be French, and appointed by the Minister of War. It will form part of the other free corps in course of organization.

"An inhabitant of Strasburg, who left Sarreguemines on Sunday, July 26, at 11 A. M., affirms," says the Impartial du Rhin, "that the news as to the destruction of the viaduct was, on that date, entirely untrue. On the same morning, very early, some ten individuals had, indeed, attempted to pull up some rails at this point, but they had been driven off by the workmen on the line, and had failed in putting their project into execution. It is possible that the Bavarians or the Prussians may have blown up some bridge beyond the frontier, as they did about Kehl, but as to the viaduct over the Sarre, at the very gates of Sarreguemines, it was all safe on Sunday morning."

M. THIERS, writing to a friend in England, says he has always been of opinion that the time would come when the ambition of Prussia would have to be resisted by France. But he always supposed the time would only be when a just occasion arose, and when all the nations of Europe should acknowledge France to be in the right. "If," M. THIERS proceeds, "when asked for the production of the dispatches, I could have obtained twenty-four hours' respite, I think that my countrymen, having time for reflection, would, perhaps, have pronounced for peace. I did not succeed, and now, always faithful to my country's flag, I can only wish for her success, while earnestly desiring that it may be at the least possible cost to humanity, and that it may bring about a lasting peace."

The Siècle gives an account of a false alarm at the French front. At Bouzonville, a few miles from Metz, a company of the Thirty-third Regiment of the line was stationed at an outpost on a wooded height in front of the town. The company was under the command of Capt. PRADELLE. One of the sentries, in the course of his beat, lost his way, and came upon a fellow sentry, who immediately fired and shot him dead. The contagion of firing set in, and the whole cordon of sentinels discharged their pieces. Capt. PRADELLE went up to the men; the regiment formed in order of battle; the Captain shouted, but the wind was high, and his voice was not heard, and he was shot through the thigh. The interference of a General put an end to the panic; when daylight set in it was found that two of the sentries had shot each other dead, and that four more were wounded.

The French papers state that the Emir ABD-EL-KADER has addressed the following letter to the Minister of War: "Praise be to God. To the very valiant Marshal of France, Minister of War. Excellency—We have learned by the voice of fame that France is about to make her powder speak against her enemies, the Prussians, (whom may God confound,) and that your very powerful Emperor, NAPOLEON III., (upon whom may Heaven shower its bounties,) has determined to place in the front ranks of his brave soldiers the sons of French Africa. He who has fought against the French would be the last of believers if he did not, in this coming war, place himself at the service of his adopted country; his tried sabre claims the honor of being among the first to march against the Prussians. The Emir ABD-EL-KADER, therefore, begs your Excellency to lay his humble petition at the foot of the glorious throne of NAPOLEON III. (to whom may God grant victory.) From the servant of God, ABD-EL-KADER BEN MAHI EDDEN BROUSSA, 6 Radia et Isaui of the year of the Hegira, 1287."

THE BUFFALO RACES.

Large Attendance and General Satisfaction—The 2:30 Race Won by Harry Harley—The $6,000 Race by Kansas Chief.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Aug. 10.—Over 20,000 persons were present at the Buffalo Park races today. The weather was beautiful, and the assemblage was the most orderly and respectable ever seen on the Park. The trots were highly exciting and satisfactory. Mr. DAVID A. GAGE, of Chicago, assisted as starting judge. The first race was for a purse of $20,000 for horses that had never beaten 2:30—$8,000 to first horse, $4,500 to second, $3,000 to third, $2,500 to fourth, and $2,000 to fifth. Eight horses started. Five heats were trotted, but the first heat was declared off on account of an accident to WILLIAM BROWN, the driver of Harry Harley, which caused considerable excitement. Before reaching the quarter-post on the first heat, BROWN, who had been sick, was unable to manage his horse and collided with Lady Augusta, breaking off a wheel and throwing BROWN heavily on his head, completely prostrating his nervous system. Medical aid was immediately called and Mr. BROWN soon recovered. Harry Harley trotted completely round the track before he was caught. DAN MACE was placed in charge of Harley, and drove the race. The following is a summary:

Wm. Brown's b. g. Harry Harley	4	1	1	1
M. Roden's ch. c. Prince	1	2	2	2
John Jennings' b. s. Anthony Wayne	6	3	3	3
J. W. Spratley's b. m. Kansas Maid	5	4	4	4
John Daly's br. m. Lady Augusta	2	6	5	5
A. Gillespie's b. g. Derby	3	7	7	6
Graves & Loomis' b. g. Bay Henry	8	5	6	dis.
John Horter's s. g. General Love	7	8	8	dis.

Time—2:29¼, 2:32, 2:27¼, 2:27.

The second race was for a purse of $1,000, for horses that had never beaten 2:50—$600 to first horse, $300 to second, $100 to third. Five heats were trotted. The following is a summary:

B. F. Aker's b. g. Kansas Chief	2	2	1	1	1
J. A. McKelvey's s. g. Bob	1	1	2	3	3
J. Dongrey, Jr.'s, br. m. Fanny Lambert	3	4	4	2	2

John McGrall's br. g. Long Branch	7	7	7	4	4
G. R. Logan's s. m. May Day	6	6	6	6	6
W. Harris' br. g. Byron Chief	4	5	5	dis.
A. Palmer & Co.'s b. m. Girl of the Period	8	8	8	dis.

Time—2:35, 2:33½, 2:32, 2:34¾, 2:29½.

The Racing of the First Day—Particulars of the Heats—Scenes and Incidents.

From Our Own Correspondent.

BUFFALO, Tuesday, Aug. 9, 1870.

The races have commenced under the most favorable circumstances of wind and weather. A fresh breeze right off the lake tempers the brilliant sunshine, which otherwise would be distressing to all. The grand stands, for Buffalo rejoices in a plurality, are thronged. The ladies' stand is gay with pretty faces and with brilliant costumes. Buffalo has sent forth of her brightest and fairest. Many handsome equipages are on the Park grounds, and vehicles of all descriptions crowd around the back inclosure. On the outside are the usual exhibitions, and in one instance a most unusual one—a two-year old colt that really has but two legs, and, moreover, that never had even three, but that arrived thus maimed into this lower sphere. As a telegram will announce to you the names of the winners and the time made, this letter need not recapitulate. Betting is warm. Americans back their own opinions by a wager, and in this respect are slow to learn wisdom. Ten started for the first race out of thirteen entries. The first heat was won by Lew. Sayers trotting within himself, but such was not the case in the second heat, where he was put to his best and closely pressed by the field. On the run home he was picked up by Derby, and the judges decided it a dead heat, the entire lot coming in well together. The last of the races being run at intervals, I give the state of affairs in the second race. Ten horses were entered; five came to the post. Western Girl was the favorite. The first heat was won by Belle Strickland in game style. The second heat was taken by Idol, two lengths in advance of the winner of the first heat. All came in pretty close together

About this time the weather changed, clouds came up, and whirlwinds of fine dust swept across the track. Great coats were in request, and umbrellas were at a premium. Careful horse-owners groaned in spirit, and dreaded coughs and influenza, the sure result of a drenching. So matters went, but the sun was propitious, and the storm passed over, leaving the sky clear overhead, and lowering on the horizon.

The third heat of the first race had more interest in it than any of the previous heats. Lady Garfield won, hard pressed by Derby, and the field in a cluster. When the mare came in cheers and hurrahs greeted her, and not a few knowing ones changed their opinions and their betting-books simultaneously. The third heat of the second race was won by Idol in fair, steady order. Indeed, when we take into account that the first race was for horses that never beat 2.34, and that the second race was for horses that never beat 2:27, we must say that the trotting was good; any mistakes in the race were quickly mended. The breaks were few and short. On two occasions when sorely pressed a few strides were made in the pacing gait, but the trot was quickly resumed. Great steadiness was observable in the scoring, and although false starts were numerous, the horses invariably got off well together. Any unevenness in the getting off was too small to weigh in a sensible degree in the issue.

At 5½ the public mind was agitated by the startling announcement that NAPOLEON III. had abdicated. Why this astute ruler should persue such a course was not disclosed. This, however, caused great commotion, and even astonished pool sellers, who, for a moment, were almost in the same state as VIRGIL's hero, when "his hair stood on end and his voice clung to his jaws." This sensation was violent and short, as such sensations should be; and when Derby was hailed the winner of the fourth heat, the assembled crowd had forgotten that a Bonaparte ever existed, and that rival hosts disputed a more difficult victory on the ancient banks of the Rhine. The trots for to-morrow offer a still better prospect of good sport. From the receipts at the gate it was computed that at least 10,000 persons attended the Buffalo Park this afternoon.

GENERAL TELEGRAMS.

GENERAL EUROPEAN NEWS.

Announcement in London of the Result of the Yacht Race for the Queen's Cup—British Iron-Clads—Mr. Thornton a K. C. B.—The Cable and Finances.

LONDON, Aug. 10.—It was first reported here that the Cambria won the race for the Queen's Cup in New-York Harbor, and there was much exultation over the victory. Her real position in the race was not known until this morning. The deception practiced on the public is bitterly denounced. The News acknowledges that England has again been beaten, and says plaintively: "So the Queen's Cup stays beyond the ocean where it has been twenty years."....It is asserted that the iron-clads Northumberland and Agincourt were unable to obey orders to proceed to sea at short notice, because unprovided with stores. The Admiralty takes pains to contradict the report. Mr. THORNTON, Ambassador at Washington, has been made Knight Commander of the Bath....The Times city article exults in the possession of the Atlantic Cable as the means of so soon restoring the financial equilibrium.

The Jewish banking-houses in Paris indignantly deny the truth of the charges made against them by the French Press.

FIRE AT ROTTERDAM.

A fire at Rotterdam destroyed a cargo of tea brought by the Bristow.

GEN. SHERIDAN.

Attack on the French Consulate at Canton, China.

LONDON, Aug. 10.—A dispatch from Hong Kong says that on the 21st of July the French Consulate at Canton was attacked by the rabble, and the Consul compelled to seek protection under the British flag. Foreigners generally were threatened.

Evacuation of Rome Complete—Desertions.

ROME, Aug. 9, via PARIS.—The evacuation of the Pontifical territory by the French troops is complete. France leaves for the Government thirty-five mortars and 15,000 shell. Desertions are frequent in the Legion d'Antibes.

FATAL MINING ACCIDENT.

Twelve Miners Precipitated Down a Shaft 200 Feet.

POTTSVILLE, Penn., Aug. 10.—At 4 o'clock this afternoon a cage in the shaft of GLASSMIER & HINES, near Middleport, containing twelve miners, was precipitated to the bottom, 200 feet, by the giving way of the hoisting machinery. The following were killed: Thomas Quigley, George Stouch, John Roper, Jacob Kline, David Jones, and John Matthews. Wounded: John McGurnley, E. Manuels, Hugh McAnuly, and Albert Koch, all terribly, and William Matthews and Patrick Day slightly. Several hours elapsed before the bodies could be brought out of the shaft. A temporary cage had to be constructed to hoist the dead and mangled bodies to the surface.

THE OHIO REPUBLICANS.

State Convention at Columbus—All Nominations Made by Acclamation—Strong Resolutions Adopted.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Aug. 10.—The Republican State Convention met at the Opera-House, at 11 o'clock this morning. The attendance was quite large. Gen. B. F. POTTS was elected temporary Chairman, and W. F. BASCOM Secretary. Gen. ISAAC R. SHERWOOD was nominated for Secretary of State by acclamation, Judge GEO. W. MCILVAIN for the Supreme Judge, Gen. WM. T. WILSON for Controller of the Treasury, and PHILLIP V. HERGING for member of the Board of Public Works. The following resolutions were presented by the Committee on Resolutions:

Resolved, That we adhere, with undiminished confidence and pride, to the party that, by its wisdom and courage, preserved the Union by a change in the organic law of the Republic, and established liberty and equality. We believe that, by the continued ascendancy of the Republican Party, will be secured the services of a free Government; that it is the safeguard of the Constitution; promotes education, order, industry, thrift, universal freedom and equal rights. We congratulate the country on the success of the present Administration, which has, without increase of taxation, reduced the national debt by an honest and economized collection of the revenue, and large reductions of the expenses of the Government; and we especially congratulate the country for this policy, which has made it possible to reduce the international revenue and tariff duties, relieving the people of their burdens to this extent without imperiling the national faith or honor.

Resolved, That the tariff for revenue is indispensable, and should be so adjusted as to be least prejudicial to the industrial and producing interests of every class or section of the whole country, securing to the home producer a fair competition against the foreign producer.

Resolved, That a change in our Navigation laws so as to admit of the registration of vessels purchased abroad, is demanded by the best interests of the country, and that such action would again give to our plundered commerce the supremacy of the seas.

Resolved, That the policy of granting subsidies of public lands to corporations and monopolists, is unqualifiedly condemned.

Resolved, That, adhering to our traditional policy of neutrality, the American people look with profound indifference upon any European controversy regarding dynastic interests merely, and are concerned in the present struggle between Germany and France only so far as the same involves the great principles of liberty; and, while we remember that the great uprising of 1848 failed of success mainly for want of Germanic union, during our recent national trial the people of Germany supported our cause with their sympathy and material aid, and while the armies of France were endeavoring to subvert a republic on this continent, and establish in its stead an imperial throne, we cannot refrain from declaring our sympathy with the present heroic efforts of the Germans to establish, maintain and defend their national unity.

The resolutions were unanimously adopted, and the last was greeted with great applause. Speeches were to be made by Gen. GARFIELD, JOHN A. BINGHAM, Prof. JAMES MONROE and others, to-night, but the outside meeting was spoiled by the rain.

Louisiana Republican State Convention.

NEW-ORLEANS, La., Aug. 10.—The Republican State Convention today made the following nominations: A. DIBUELET, State Treasurer; JAMES GRAHAM, State Auditor. Lieut.-Gov. DUNN is President of the Convention. The Congressional District Conventions, held here today, made the following nominations: First District, Gen. J. H. SYPHER, for both terms; Second District, A. L. SHELDON, renominated; Third District, C. B. DARRALL, renominated. The representatives of the Fourth and Fifth Districts will hold conventions in their respective districts in September.

THE NATHAN CASE.

A Ridiculous Episode in the History of the Dark Tragedy.

Fourth Day of the Coroner's Investigation.

The Nathans Completely Vindicated---Mr. Williams' Story About the "Dog"---The Instrument Seen on the Premises a Year Ago.

The Search for the Assassin—A Policeman on the Wrong Track—A Respectable Lawyer Arrested as the Murderer—The Nyack Story.

It will be remembered that in the Rogers case, eighteen months ago, several persons, against whom there was not a title of evidence, were arrested for suspected complicity in the assassination, and it has now been proved that the Nathan case is not to close without similar exhibitions of stupidity on the part of the Police. An arrest has at last been made in the affair, but its only effect has been to relieve a woeful tragedy by a farcical interlude. Very many people in this City know THOMAS DUNPHY, a lawyer, at No. 4 Warren-street, called among his host of friends TOM DUNPHY, and greeted as a "hale fellow well met," under almost any circumstances. DUNPHY has achieved the notoriety of being arrested as the murderer of BENJAMIN NATHAN.

On Tuesday evening he was visiting some acquaintances in Brooklyn, and singularly enough, he seems to have been known in the house as Mr. GILBERT. The reason for this singular misconception on the part of persons with whom he was onfcalling terms does not appear, but whatever may have been the cause, the fact added greatly to poor TOM's subsequent embarrassments. Naturally enough, the conversation turned to the Nathan murder, and DUNPHY, who had read up the case thoroughly, employed his legal acumen in dealing with the facts to such alarming purpose that he soon convinced at least one of his hearers that such an acquaintance with the manner and purpose of the crime could be shown by no person but the unknown criminal himself. Learned and eloquent TOM DUNPHY showed precisely how the murderer got into the house, and stated with marvelous minuteness every act of the assassin, until having secured his retreat, he dropped the "dog" at the front door and passed out into the lonely street. All this, the unfortunate DUNPHY, for the sake of preciseness and dramatic effect, had related in the first person. A horrified young woman, who in the next room overheard it all, and with blood curdled by the fiendish malignity of the assassin who could thus dilate upon his horrible deed, slipped out into the street to call the Police. Officer MURPHY, of the Fourth Precinct, was soon found, and to him she made the startling announcement that she not only knew who murdered Mr. NATHAN, but knew where he was at that moment; he was a villian named GILBERT, and was then in the house. MURPHY was nothing loth to earn the great rewards awaiting the capturer of the assassin, and the young woman piloting him on the way, he marched into the room and dumbfounded poor DUNPHY by seizing him by the coat-collar as GILBERT, the murderer of Mr. NATHAN. DUNPHY tried to laugh, but seeing that the officer was in earnest he endeavored to explain, saying his name was DUNPHY, and that he was telling of what he had read in the newspapers. But the officer declared this was "too thin," and in spite of the prayers and struggles of his prisoner, carried him off to Police Head-quarters, and into the presence of Chief of Police CAMPBELL. That functionary listened to the story of the young woman and the explanations of DUNPHY, and was then positively certain that he had in his hands the great criminal of the age. The prisoner had two names, which was in itself a suspicious circumstance; but he had also confessed his crime, and had a hang-dog look that confirmed his story. Therefore he held on with determined grip to the desperate villain, in spite of protestations, and after keeping him in prison from 5 o'clock in the afternoon until a little after midnight, forwarded him, per Officer MURPHY, to Superintendent JOURDAN, to be dealt with according to law. MURPHY went first to the Central Police Building, No. 300 Mulberry-street, but JOURDAN had long been gone, and MURPHY, after waiting a long time, finally, at 2 o'clock in the morning, collared DUNPHY, and bore him off to the residence of Superintendent JOURDAN, at No. 198 Prince-street. He rang the bell, but there was no response. Holding the now terrified and exhausted DUNPHY, whose only crime was his power as a narrator, resolutely with one hand, the determined MURPHY jerked violently at the bell, until he pulled off the handle. Then he fell to kicking, and soon broke out a panel of the door. A head was then thrust out of an upper window, and a frightened lady asked what was wanted. It appeared that nearly all of his noise had been heard, but it was such a dreadful din that the inmates supposed it was a party of drunken ruffians who wanted to get some one out on bail; and Superintendent JOURDAN not having yet returned home, his family were afraid to make any response. So much of this explanation being given to MURPHY as sufficed to make him understand that the Superintendent was not at home, that indefatigable officer returned with his trophy to the Central Police Building, where he waited patiently, with DUNPHY constantly in hand, until JOURDAN went to his office at 9 o'clock in the morning. A few words were then sufficient to ring down the curtain on a farce which DUNPHY had signally failed to enjoy, and that gentleman being at last discharged, went his way, vowing that he will never again tell a story as well as he can.

In compliance with instructions from Superintendent JOURDAN, Capt. BURDEN, of the Twenty-ninth Precinct, sent Officer MULLIGAN to investigate the Nyack story, and the following report of his discoveries was submitted yesterday:

Officer MULLIGAN left New-York City at 6 A. M., Aug. 9, 1870, and proceeded to New City, Rockland County, where he found a man named JOHN MILLER, who had been arrested as the supposed murderer of Mr. NATHAN by JACOB C. SMITH, the Constable of Rockland County. When Officer MULLIGAN arrived at New City, he had a conversation with JOHN MILLER, who was locked up in one of the cells of the jail, and he (the said MILLER) stated to Officer MULLIGAN, that he was a native of Baden, Germany, aged sixty-three, and a missionary preacher; that he came from California about four weeks ago and stopped at the Baden Hotel in Greenwich-street; that on the night of the murder of BENJ. NATHAN, he was at Mr. SINGERLENS, about five miles from Fordham. He also says he saw Mr. NATHAN about seven years ago at the Astor House, and never saw him before or since, and never had any business with him, and knows nothing of the murder except what he has read in the papers. He also said that he did not know any member of the family, and that it was JOHN JACOB ASTOR who pointed Mr. NATHAN out to him. In my opinion the man is insane. He is still held by the Constable in the County Jail, to see if they could get any evidence against him on some crime committed in that county.

THE INQUEST YESTERDAY.

The inquest in the Nathan case was resumed yesterday morning in the Supreme Court General Term. The attendance was larger perhaps than on any of the preceding days, and the interest in the investigation was unabated. Mr. HARMON NATHAN, eldest son of the deceased, was present yesterday, for the first time, accompanied by his brothers, WASHINGTON and FREDERICK, and was the object of considerable attention. A large number of witnesses were examined, but none of the testimony was of unusual importance.

The first witness examined was Mr. LEONARD W. BOOLE, a shipwright of thirty-three years' experience. He was called as an expert to testify as to the branch of mechanical trade in which the implement called the "dog" was commonly used. He stated that the instrument found in the residence of the deceased on the morning of the murder was smaller and lighter than those used in shipwright yards, but was somewhat similar to those employed in the construction of canal-boats and of smaller vessels. In his opinion it could be used in laying the deck of a barge or the floors of a house, and the indentations in its back were made by a house carpenter's hammer and not by a shipwright's maul.

MICHAEL MCEWEN and HENRY MORE, plumbers, and RICHARD KING, laborer, who had been employed in Mr. NATHAN'S house before the murder, testified as to the ease with which they gained access through the front basement door, without being observed by any one in the house, at different times. Neither of them had ever seen the "dog" anywhere about the premises.

The most important evidence of the day was that of MORRIS R. WILLIAMS, a mason, whose employer had been engaged in the execution of repairs in Mr. NATHAN'S house two weeks previous to the murder. He testified most emphatically that, in September last, he saw an instrument very much like the "dog" (produced) lying in the stable, near the door. He seemed disinclined to swear positively it was the same instrument, for one of the ends appeared different from the one he saw in the stable, but they certainly resembled each other very closely—in fact, he thought it was the same instrument. At the time he first noticed this "dog," he observed the floor was freshly patched in different places, and he was under the impression that it had been left behind by some workmen. He had never seen the "dog" since, and assigned as a reason for not informing the Police of the circumstance on the morning of the murder, that he was so much excited he lost all recollection of the matter.

ROBERT NEWTON, an employe of Mr. WILLIAMS, testified that he had been at work at Mr. NATHAN'S prior to the murder; had seen an implement like that in Court in a shipwright's yard, but nowhere about Mr. NATHAN'S house or stable. He had a recollection of being told by Mr. WILLIAMS that the "dog" was in the stable, but at the time he attached no importance to it, and it now seemed like a dream.

At this point Mr. WASHINGTON NATHAN was recalled and examined briefly. He was asked at what part of the house he was on the morning of the murder when he discovered the hall door was open, and replied he was on the second step from the hall. He also stated, in answer to further inquiries, that the coachman was in the employment of the family four or five years, and was in the country on the night of the murder.

Mr. FREDERICK then took the stand, and considerable interest was manifested in his testimony. His demeanor on the stand was calm and collected, and his statement impressed all with its sincerity and truthfulness. He said that on the evening before the murder he accompanied his father from his residence to the synagogue, and after service went to the house of his uncle, Mr. LYONS. He left there a few minutes before 8 o'clock, a short time after his brother WASHINGTON, who had also been visiting there, had departed. He spent the evening in Brooklyn, and returned to the City on the 11 o'clock boat by the Fulton Ferry. He immediately took the stage to Twenty-first-street, and after partaking of some refreshments, arrived home about 12¼ o'clock. As he passed up the stairs, he discovered his father's door was open, and the old gentleman asked, "Who is there?" to which he replied, "It is I." There was no light in the room at the time, and after a few words more retired to bed. In the morning, a short time after he had arisen, he was startled by the cry of his brother, and proceeding down stairs, he discovered the body of his father. (Mr. NATHAN here described the condition of his body, and, on dwelling on the details, became deeply affected. As he related how he bent over the body, beseeching his father to speak to him, if only for once more, his eyes were suffused with tears, his voice was tremulous, and his whole appearance indicated great agitation.) He stated it was not customary with his father to keep more than $200 or $300 in the house, and he was not aware he had other valuables of any description. He also stated he was a member of the Stock Exchange, did business in the Street on his own account, and the last pecuniary assistance he derived from his father was a sum of $600 or $700 in April. He had no quarrels with his father, nor had his brothers, to NATHAN'S knowledge. He professed all ignorance of the existence of a will and whether two wills had been made. The only thing he knew in this connection was that about six or eight months since his father had spoken of making him executor. He had never seen the "dog" on the premises, nor did he see it on the morning of the murder. He denied the accuracy of Officer MANGAN'S statement with regard to his pointing out the instrument to him on that morning, and he had never seen it until produced in Court.

At the conclusion of this testimony, WASHINGTON NATHAN was again called, and stated that when he had arisen on the morning of the 29th of July he distinctly heard footsteps in young KELLY'S room over-head, and that the latter did not make his appearance until he had come from his father's room a second time, a few minutes after he gave the alarm. He found that he picked up the pocket-book the third or fourth time he entered his father's room and examined its contents.

Mr. FREDERICK NATHAN was recalled and asked if he had heard any footsteps in KELLY'S room on the night of the murder, to which he answered in the negative.

The inquest then adjourned until 10½ o'clock this morning, when it will be resumed in the same Court. WM. KELLY is expected to be placed on the stand, and his evidence is looked forward to with eager interest.

Inquest Before the Coroner—Fourth Day of the Investigation—Testimony of L. H. Boole, Michael McEwen, Richard King, M. R. Williams, Washington Nathan and Frederick Nathan.

The first witness called yesterday was Mr. LEONARD H. BOOLE.

TESTIMONY OF MR. BOOLE.

Examined by the Coroner:

Q.—Where do you reside? A.—No. 109 Ninth-street, between Third and Fourth avenues.

Q.—What is your business? A.—Shipwright.

Q.—How long have you been in the business? A.—Nearly twenty-three years, with the exception of the last three years.

Q.—In your business, do you use a tool or instrument called a "dog?" A.—Yes.

Q.—Is it such an instrument as this? (showing the "dog.") A.—We use an instrument similar to this; this is smaller than the ones generally used; they are made variously, some like this, and some different; some are made for the purpose of holding things in position, and some for the purpose of steadying anything that will not stand up of itself; this would be called a small deck dog; there is another shape, however, which, instead of having the ends parallel, have them at right angles with each other; this, is intended to drive in a beam across the grain, and close up the seams of the deck plank; it would be used for inch or inch and a half plank, like the deck of a canal-boat or flooring of anything that it might be used for.

Q.—What is the thickness of deck plank? A.—Seldom more than five inches in yachts, and small vessels not more than three.

Q.—Where are they manufactured. A.—They are always made at the smiths' shop in the yard.

Q.—You observe those points are made of steel? A.—I see that they are.

Q.—Do you ever have them steel-pointed. A.—No; I never saw a steel-pointed one before in my life; this dog has never been used in a shipyard; the reason I think so is, that the indentations on it are not such as would be made by a ship-carpenter's maul; these have been made by the hammer of a house-carpenter; I should suppose that the man that made this dog never saw one before; if he had been a ship-smith he would have left all the iron here, (indicating the ends of the dog,) where the weakest point is, and it would not need to be steel-pointed.

By Mr. FELLOWS—Among mechanical tools have you ever seen an instrument like that, (indicating the dog.) A.—Only, as I say, in our ship-yards, and I have never seen one so smal as that.

Q.—Are such instruments in use among house-carpenters? A.—I cannot say; I can only say as to my experience in laying floors.

By Mr. FIELDS—Are instruments of that kind used in lumber-yards among cedar logs? A.—In cedar logs or posts they would need something of that kind, but stronger, thicker than that.

Q.—Have you seen it before? A.—Yes.

Q.—Have you communicated with the Superintendent of Police? A.—Not in detail; but I told him that the article had never been used in a ship-yard.

By Mr. RUSSELL—Do I understand you to say you never saw a dog with steel points? Do you know whether caulkers use such? A.—No, caulkers never use them.

By Mr. FIELDS—You observe that instrument is bent—would that bending occur in the process of using it? A.—Yes, that would occur in the process I have described of laying a floor or the top or deck of a canal-boat or barge.

Q.—Would it be adapted to the floor of a house? A.—Yes; a ship-carpenter would need something of the kind if he went to lay the floor of a house, but whether a house-carpenter would use it, I cannot say.

By Mr. FELLOWS—Will you give me the names of the principal yacht-builders? A.—Well, these are such hard times we have all had to leave the business and go at something else, but there is Mr. POILLON, of Brooklyn, and there is a yard at Astoria, and one at Manhattanville.

Q.—Is there not a yard in the East River where the Cambria was taken up? A.—She was taken up on the screw-dock.

Q.—Is there any place where canal-boats are built? A.—I do not know any place except up the North River, at Nyack, or any small hole up the North River.

TESTIMONY OF MICHARL M'EWEN.

Q.—What is your business? A.—House-carpenter.

Q.—Have you done business for Mr. NATHAN? A.—Yes, Sir; the Saturday previous to the murder I took away my tools: I have been engaged in plumbing work.

Q.—How long had you worked there? A.—About four days.

Q.—How did you get in the house? A.—When I took materials there I got in by the stable; I went in that way about four times; when the men got done in the stable I went in by the basement.

Q.—How did you get in by the basement? A.—I had to ring the bell once or twice.

Q.—Did you see Mr. BENJAMIN NATHAN there? A.—Yes; I saw him in the attic; the last words he said to me were to hurry up and get through.

Q.—How often did you find the wooden basement door open? A.—Four or five times.

Q.—During the time you was at work there did you ever see an instrument like this?—(showing the dog.) A.—No, Sir.

Q.—Did you notice anybody else there except Mrs. KELLY and her son, the carpenters and masons? A.—No, I did not notice any strangers.

TESTIMONY OF HENRY MORE.

Live at No. 166 West Twenty-seventh-street; worked for Mr. MCEWEN; am a plumber; have worked at No. 23 West Twenty-third-street; worked there four days.

By the CORONER—What time in the morning did you usually go there? A.—About quarter past seven; sometimes later.

Q.—How did you usually get in? A.—Generally by the basement door.

Q.—Who let you in? A.—Mrs. KELLY'S son let me in once or twice; sometimes I opened the iron gate when the other door was open.

Q.—How many times did you open the door yourself? A.—I could not say; perhaps three or four times.

Q.—Who did you see in the house beside the family? A.—Mrs. KELLY, her son, the carpenters and masons.

Q.—During the time you were there did you ever see an instrument like that—the dog? A.—No, Sir.

Q.—During the time you were at work who did you see? A.—The carpenters, masons, Mrs. KELLY and her son.

Q.—Did any person come to see you? A.—No, Sir.

Q.—Were you ever in the front room or library? A.—No, Sir.

A.—Did you ever speak to anybody about having worked in that house? A.—No, Sir.

By Mr. FIELDS.—Where did you usually see Mrs. KELLY'S son? A.—I usually saw him by the windows.

Q.—Was he doing anything? A.—No; reading the papers, I believe.

Q.—Did you ever have any conversation with Mrs. KELLY'S son? A.—No, Sir.

Q.—Did any one ever come up to see him? A.—No, Sir, not to my knowledge.

Q.—Where did you sleep on the night of the murder? A.—I slept in my bedroom.

Q.—Where were you that evening? A.—I did not go out after I went home.

Q.—When did you first hear of the murder? A.—On Friday morning, about ten minutes past seven o'clock, I was going through Twenty-third-street and saw a crowd at the door, and went and asked what was the matter.

Q.—Did you go into the house? A.—No, Sir, I went on to my work.

TESTIMONY OF RICHARD KING.

Live at No. 111 East Twenty-seventh-street; am a laborer; work for Mr. WILLIAMS; on the 28th of July I was at work at Mr. NATHAN'S; had been working there twelve days.

Q.—What time did you usually get there in the morning? A.—A quarter before seven.

Q.—How did you get in? A.—I used to ring the basement bell.

Q.—Who let you in? A.—Sometimes Mrs. KELLY, sometimes her son.

Q.—Did you ever get in yourself? A.—I got in as far as the basement door through the gate.

Q.—Then you could not get in? A.—No.

Q.—Did you ever see anything like this "dog?" A.—No, Sir, never since I came to this country, but in the old country I have seen something similar, only there was a thread on the points where a nut went on.

Q.—Where were you working on Thursday? A.—I was putting some tops on the chimney.

Q.—Did you notice the scuttle? A.—Yes, I locked it after I went down.

Q.—What time was it? A.—Quarter-past five.

Q.—What time did you leave? A.—Eight or nine minutes to six.

Q.—How did you get out? A.—By the basement door.

Q.—Where did you go? A.—Never left the house (my hom) until the next morning.

Q.—When did you first hear of the murder? A.—Next morning I went there and found a crowd; I saw young KELLY inside, and I asked him what was the matter, and he told me Mr. NATHAN was murdered; "Was it out?" said I; "No," said he, "in his room; then I went to the boss and told him we could not work there—that there was something wrong.

TESTIMONY OF MORRIS R. WILLIAMS.

Reside at No. 602 East Fifteenth-street; am a mason; have done work at Mr. NATHAN'S up to the time of his death; had been at work for him for thirteen or fourteen days previous to the murder; sometimes got in by ringing the basement bell, sometimes by knocking at the stable door.

Q.—Did you ever open the basement door and go in by yourself? A.—I did once; Mrs. KELLY was in the hall; she said she left it open to admit the air, but she said that either she or her son was always there; I made a remark about the door being open, and that was the reply she made.

Q.—During the time you worked there, or since, have you ever told any person that you saw an instrument like this "dog" in the stable? A.—Yes, I said I had seen an instrument like it lying behind the stable door a year ago; it was lying behind the door as you go out in the yard to the left, but I do not think this was the instrument.

Q.—I ask you who you told? A.—I believe I mentioned it to Mr. TIEMAN, a detective on Broadway, and Mr. SAMUEL WILLIAMS, of No. 80 Broadway.

Q.—Do you think this was the instrument? A.—No, I think the one I saw was heavier; it struck my mind that the carpenters had left it there; they had been repairing the floor, putting in some new pieces of plank.

Q.—Did you take it in your hand? A.—No, Sir.

Q.—Your opinion is that it was heavier? A.—Yes; and the one I saw was sharper at the points.

By Mr. FELLOWS—How long has this house been built? A.—About twelve years.

Q.—Did you receive directions from Mr. NATHAN as to its construction? A.—Yes, and from Mr. THOMAS, the architect.

Q.—Are there any secret closets in that house? A.—None to my knowledge.

Q.—I mean any in which the doors fit into the walls so that they cannot be seen? A.—No, Sir.

Q.—You say that you did not take up this instrument? A.—No, Sir.

Q.—Did you see it more than once? A.—No, Sir.

Q.—Did you observe it particularly? A.—No; I only saw it as I was passing through.

Q.—Might it not have been the instrument just as it is now? A.—I might, but it appears to my mind that it was different.

Q.—You cannot swear that it is not the same? A.—No, Sir.

Q.—When did you first see this instrument? A.—Some time about a year ago.

Q.—I mean this instrument here? A.—I cannot say; I saw it at Police Head-quarters.

Q.—When you first saw it, did it occur to your mind that it was the same you saw a year ago? A.—No, Sir.

Q.—What way did the stable doors open? A.—Inside.

Q.—And this instrument was lying in the stable? A.—Yes, Sir.

Q.—Which door? A.—The back door going out into the yard.

Q.—Your attention has been drawn to that since? A.—No, Sir.

Q.—Can you fix the date? A.—It was some time in September.

Q.—When you first saw this "dog," did it occur to you that it might be the same you had seen in the stable in September? A.—No.

Q.—How soon after did this occur to you? A.—Very soon afterward.

Q.—Have you said anything to the inmates of the house? A.—I have asked them all if they had seen it before.

ROBERT NEWTON'S TESTIMONY.

Live at No. 47 Kosciusko-street, Brooklyn; work for Mr. MORRIS WILLIAMS; was at work at Mr. NATHAN'S on the 28th of July; was fixing the chimneys on the roof: usually went to work at about 7 o'clock in the morning; sometimes went in by the basement door and sometimes through the stable; saw there only the housekeeper and her son, and the carpenters.

Q.—Did you ever see an instrument like this dog in the stable at Mr. NATHAN'S house? A.—No, Sir.

Q.—Did you ever see an instrument like that before? A.—Yes, in a ship-yard.

Q.—Did you ever hear Mr. WILLIAMS say that he had seen an instrument like that in Mr. NATHAN'S stable? A.—He said it was like a dream to him that he had seen something like it.

TESTIMONY OF WASHINGTON NATHAN.

WASHINGTON NATHAN being recalled and questioned, described the position of the stairs, and being asked whether he saw the street door open as he came down stairs, said that he did; that when he got down all but two steps he saw the door open.

Q.—You could see the front door open? A.—Yes, Sir; I was two steps from the floor—from the landing.

Q.—You mean by that two steps from the hall? A.—Yes, Sir; two steps more to go down; from that position I noticed the front door was open.

Q.—Is the same coachman in the employment of the family now, that was a year ago? A.—Yes, Sir.

Q.—How long has he been with you? A.—Four or five years; I think it is as long as that.

Q.—Can you tell the jury from whose recommendation Mrs. KELLY was first employed by your father to take charge of the house? A.—No, Sir.

Q.—On the night of the murder, where was the coachman? A.—In the country.

TESTIMONY OF FREDERICK NATHAN.

Q.—What is your name? A.—FREDERICK NATHAN.

Q.—Where do you reside? A.—No. 12 West Twenty-third-street.

Q.—On the night of July 28, when did you leave the house? A.—Thirty-five minutes past six, with my father.

Q.—Where did you go? A.—We walked down Fifth-avenue to the synagogue, and went up stairs together; left the synagogue a little after seven, twenty minutes or a quarter past, and we went to my aunt's; I saw my father talking to one of my sisters; I remained there some time, and left the house about twenty minutes to eight.

Q.—When did your father leave? A.—I think my father left five or ten minutes before I did.

Q.—Where did you go after leaving your aunt's? A.—I went to the south-west corner of Fifth-avenue and Twenty-first-street; I made a call there; there were two gentlemen, I think, sitting in the door-way; I believe I was introduced to one of them; I don't recollect whether I was to the other

Q.—When did you leave them? A.—In a very short time.

Q.—Where did you go then? A.—I jumped into a Twenty-third-street stage and rode down to the Hamilton Ferry.

Q.—About what time was that? A.—I crossed over, I think, at a quarter or half-past eight; I walked up four blocks and turned to my left; I think it was Carrol-street; I made a call on a friend, and remained until half-past ten o'clock or twenty-five minutes to eleven; it was raining then; they asked me if I would remain there all night; I told them no, that my father was in the city, and I preferred to go home; the lady gave me an umbrella, and I walked a couple of squares down, stopping at a druggists in Court-street, where I got a glass of Vichy water, more as an excuse to be out of the rain than anything else; I waited until a car came down, and rode down to the ferry; I think it was the eleven o'clock boat that I took; the first boat, of course, that came to the dock; crossed the ferry, got into a Fifth-avenue stage.

Q.—Which ferry was this? A.—Fulton Ferry; I took a stage, which I had to myself, and rode as far as Twenty-first-street, where I got out and went into a restaurant and got some poached eggs and a brandy smash.

Q.—When did you leave there? A.—Between ten and fifteen minutes past twelve, and went immediately home; I opened the door with my night-key; found the key was not in the door; of course I knew by that that my brother was out; I knew as I went upstairs that I should find my father in, and in passing his door—his door was open—he said, "Who is there?" I said, "It is me, Sir;" he said, "Is WASHINGTON there?" I said, "No;" he said, "If you want some ice-water you can come in here and get some;" I said, "No, I have just had a drink;" then I left him and went immediately to my room.

Q.—Did you notice a light in the room? A.—No, Sir, it was perfectly dark.

Q.—Was his door open? A.—The door was open sufficiently for me to go in; not fully open; I then went immediately to my room and the gas on the third story was rather dim, and I turned it up full, so as to allow my brother to see when he came upstairs; took off my shoes; I believe I took off my pants before closing the door; I am not certain about that, and immediately went to bed, knowing that I was obliged to rise early; in fact, I had had very little sleep that week, and was very tired.

Q.—Did you hear your brother come in? A.—No, Sir, I did not; he is often going to his room without my hearing him.

Q.—What time in the morning did you arise? A.—By my watch it was ten minutes of six; I set my watch every night, as it gains about ten minutes every day; when I rose, I went to the window and looked out to see what kind of a day it was going to be; it was a close morning; very close; I went to the window as I am always in the habit of doing before dressing; I generally draw my shade down; I then open my door, having on my drawers, and walk down the hall to a large room in the rear, where we have been in the habit of having our clean clothes kept after they are returned from the wash.

Q.—Was your brother's door open when you looked out? A.—My brother's door was open, and I saw him lying in his room apparently asleep; I didn't care to wake him; I returned the same way, and whether I found first stockings free before going to my sister's room, I don't know, but from there I went to my sister's room, which is adjoining mine; in coming out of there I met my brother; he said he was going down stairs and would wake father; I said, "I don't think there is any use;" my father always woke up on such an occasion without being called; he went down stairs; I returned to my room, and the first thing I heard was I heard him yell; whether he called my name I could not say, but without a moment's delay I rushed down there; it was my first impression that my brother had met somebody in the hall, but I saw him standing by my father's door; I rushed in there, and at the first moment knelt down on the right hand side of my father to see if he was entirely dead; whether I touched him or not I have no recollection; then I ran down stairs and on reaching the landing I looked toward the door; it was open sufficiently for a man to walk inside without edging sideways.

Q.—Are you certain of that? A.—I have a distinct recollection of it.

Q.—Did you see any policeman? A.—I looked out at the door, and I think the policeman was down near the other end as if surprised; we beckoned to him, and also to a man opposite, at the Fifth-avenue Hotel, who was washing the sidewalk; before he reached the house there were several gentlemen there who were in the hotel, one of whom, a Mr. BERGH, resides opposite the house; I have seen him often return home to dress himself in the afternoon; several of the gentlemen, I am not certain whether Mr. BERGH was among them, accompanied us up stairs to my father's room; I think there were three or four men went up the first landing, and some, I think remained in the hall.

Q.—When you first entered your father's room did you notice a light burning? No, Sir, I did not see any; my whole attention was directed to my father; I could not attend to anything, but to see that my father was entirely dead; if he could speak one word.

Q.—What was the position of your father's body? A.—He was lying on his back, I think a little inclined to the left; his head was very nearly straight; his right leg was extended across the threshold of the door, his left drawn up tight against the door, which was open from the library into the bed-room; his arm was at an angle, his right hand being a little higher than his left.

Q.—Were his hands closed? A.—They were not; they were half open.

Q.—Did you notice the condition of the blood, whether congulated or not? A.—I had my stockings on before leaving my room, and when I stepped up to his body I felt my stockings grow cold as the blood came upon them.

Q.—Have you seen this dog before? A.—I have never had it in my hand.

Q.—Did you see it that morning? A.—I did not.

Q.—Did you see the officer have it? A.—No, Sir.

Q.—Didn't see it lying on the floor? A.—No, Sir; have not had it in my hand at all; have not seen any one have it.

Q.—What did you do after you went down to the door? A.—I sent for a doctor and immediately went up stairs again and stood at my father's head and asked him if he could speak one word; then I went down stairs again and walked all over the house; I know that during the examination of the house I went up to the garrett and all over, and could not find a single trace of anybody.

Q.—What did you discover in the library? A.—I didn't go there; of course, I looked in there, and saw papers lying on the floor, the safe door open.

Q.—Did you see the chair upset? A.—I don't know whether it was or not.

Q.—Do you know whether there were other valuables in that safe? A.—Not to my knowledge; my father kept simply bonds and mortgages there, and perhaps a few hundred dollars; during the Summer time I don't think he kept much money there; there was no necessity for it, he being out of town.

Q.—How long had your father been out of town? A.—He went out of town the last of June; I don't recollect exactly when; I know he went out two weeks later than he was in the habit of doing, because he could not find a place that suited him.

Q.—Did he have any regular days for coming into the City? A.—Only Mondays, and sometimes Fridays were his days.

Q.—Did you notice the door between your father's room and the rear room? A.—Yes; I noticed the bath-room door was closed, and I think the nearest door was closed to within two inches.

By Mr. FELLOWS—Did you hear your brother's testimony yesterday? A.—I did.

Q.—All of it? A.—Yes, Sir.

Q.—Did you hear those questions that were asked him relative to the feeling existing between himself and his father? A.—Yes, Sir.

Q.—What was the relationship existing between your father and you in regard to any matters of business? A.—Whenever I asked my father for money he always gave it to me, simply saying that he hoped I was not speculating too largely.

Q.—What business are you engaged in? A.—I am a member of the New-York Stock Exchange.

Q.—When did you last receive any financial aid from your father? A.—April 23.

Q.—How much did you receive? A.—Six or seven hundred dollars.

Q.—Did you ever have any disputes or quarrels? A.—Often had disputes and arguments on business, simply in regard to the state of the market.

Q.—I mean, did you have any quarrels? A.—Of course I have had words, but the next day it would be the same as before.

Q.—When you came down stairs, when did you first learn that your father had been murdered? A.—I think my brother said it first; I rushed into the room and saw him there.

Q.—Do you know what was your father's habit as to carrying money on his person? A.—The largest check I have known my father to draw for the house was $500 or $600; he never carried more than $100 or $200.

Q.—When your father was at home did he transact his business in this little library? A.—Yes, Sir; he kept his check book there and did his writing there.

Q.—Do you know who paid the servants about your house? A.—My father paid them, either himself or through my mother.

Q.—Do you know of any of the servants visiting him in that library to receive their pay? A.—Yes, Sir; they have often been in there that way; I have seen them.

Q.—When your father received money where did he put it? A.—He generally sent a boy to the bank with it, or deposited it in the safe.

Q.—Did you ever see him take any money from that safe or put any in when the servant was by? A.—A servant might have been in the room; I don't know about that.

Q.—Now, as to the coachman, the males employed in and about that house, did he pay them directly? A.—I think he did; not through my mother at all events.

Q.—Do you know how he was accustomed to pay his coachman—by checks or by money? A.—I don't know about the regulations of the house; I think he paid them in money.

Q.—Do you know whether it was his custom to keep money in the safe when he had money? A.—He was accustomed to keep $200 or $300 in it.

Q.—You heard no noise during the night? A.—No, Sir.

Q.—How about this pocket-book? A.—I picked it up from the floor.

Q.—When you first entered the room? A.—No; the second or third time.

Q.—Did you examine its contents? A.—I found some currency, but the amount I can't say, and 100 shares in the German-American Bank.

Q.—To your father's order? A.—To the name of BEN. NATHAN.

Q.—Was it indorsed? A.—No, Sir.

Q.—Was there anything else in the pocket-book? A.—Some cuttings from newspapers and some memorandum.

Q.—How large a pocket-book was it? A.—About five inches in length.

Q.—Did you hear any foot-steps in KELLY'S room on Thursday night? A.—No, Sir.

MR. FREDERICK NATHAN RECALLED.

Mr. FREDERICK NATHAN was recalled and examined by the Foreman.

Q.—Did you hear any footsteps in KELLY'S room on Thursday night? A.—No, Sir.

Q.—What conversation had you with your father before retiring to bed? A.—When I opened his door I did not intend to speak to him, but he asked who was that, and then I replied; he said if I wanted a drink there was some ice water in the room, and I told him I had some before I came home; that was all the conversation we had.

Mr. RUSSELL—Do you know what hour young KELLY was in the habit of getting up in the morning? A.—He had the boots blacked when I got down-stairs.

Q.—What hour was he in the habit of retiring? A.—He was always in bed before I came home; my average hour is twelve o'clock.

The Coroner stated there were no other witnesses present that day, and adjourned the investigation to half-past ten o'clock this morning.

CUBAN AFFAIRS.

Restoration of an Obnoxious System of Taxation Threatened—Possible Resignation of Rodas in Consequence—A War Joke—Absolutism of the Volunteers—Mode of Carrying on the War—Surrender of Castellanos—Miscellaneous.

From Our Own Correspondent.

HAVANA, Wednesday, Aug. 3, 1870.

Questions which will prove difficult to solve have sprung up between the authorities of Spain and those of the island relative to the direct tax, which the home Government insists on re-establishing, and which is exceedingly obnoxious to the people of the island. When the measure had been broached first it met with opposition, and being but superficially studied by those who inaugurated it, a failure to meet the wants of the public and at the same time satisfy the national treasury was the natural result. It was first inaugurated about two and a half years ago, when the country was just recovering from the effects of a partial commercial crisis, and although no war then existed, it nevertheless was more disastrous in its effects on industry and commerce than the present state of affairs. The entire population of the island, without exception, headed by all the prominent Crown officers, is a unit against the odious measure, but the Home Goverument insists on restoring it, although RODAS, advised by the principal merchants and planters, had abolished it. Everybody here prefers indirect taxation through export and import duties, which, under the present régime, are collected with great care and honesty. In July, 1868, the import and export duties at the port of Havana amounted to $382,000; in July, 1869, to $400,000, and the same month, just passed, shows, that with decreased exports and imports, somewhat over $900,000 have been collected. This proves that in former years the united thieving society of honorable merchants and patriotic employes robbed the treasury of over half a million of dollars monthly, and in addition compelled the people to pay this amount over again in the shape of taxes, in order to raise the amount required to govern and misgovern the island and fee a select party of Ministers and their friends in Spain. People here are very much incensed against MORET, the Colonial Minister, whom they accuse of connivance with the Cuban party, and who, they say, is either bought or influenced by Mr. AZCARATE, a Cuban by birth, who published a journal in Madrid some time ago. This AZCARATE is considered an emissary of the Cuban revolutionists, but such is not the case, although AZCARATE, to judge from his past life and writings, would not be over sorry to have Spanish rule cease in Cuba. It has been rumored in select circles that RODAS sent a telegram to the Colonial Minister in Spain, tendering his resignation as Captain-General, if the system of direct taxation should be persisted in. If RODAS leaves, the Intendente, Mr. SANTOS, and Secretary FERNANDEZ will accompany him, and, perhaps, LOPEZ ROBERTS, the political Governor, also.

ONE OF THE HUMORS OF THE WAR.

A good joke, for as such I consider it, has been in circulation for some days, namely, that President CESPEDES had issued a proclamation, in view of the war in Europe, announcing that the Republic of Cuba, its army and navy, would remain strictly neutral; forbidding all its citizens abroad to interfere or take part on either side.

VOLUNTEER DEFIANCE OF LAW.

DIAZ QUINTERO, the Spanish Deputy, will open his eyes when he sees the numerous indignant protests written by volunteers against his attack on them. But the same steamer, also, took out hundreds of letters, containing sufficient authentic information to enable Mr. QUINTERO to make another fierce attack on the volunteers. Many acts have been committed by volunteers, which, by them, are undoubtedly considered very laudable and praiseworthy, but which appear in a very different light when viewed at a distance of three thousand miles, with eyes not yet blinded by bigotry and brutal party spirit. The most prominent document perhaps is that written by Don ESTEBAN PARODI, the companion of MORA in imprisonment in the Cardenas Jail, whose case has caused so much excitement and comment. Both of the accused were discharged by the Supreme Court of the island, but the volunteers retained them in spite of the order of the Court, and a military court-martial was called, which sentenced them to death. The Captain-General declined to approve the sentence, and referred the case to Spain, where, I understand, the Supreme Court has also absolved the accused. The volunteers again refusamg to obey the orders of the tribunal, Brig.-Gen. ZEA, the Chief of Staff, went to Cardenas on Saturday, but failed to convince the volunteers that they ought to release their captives. The following extracts from PARODI'S letter are very significant:

"I have read with surprise that myself and MORA had been assassinated by the volunteers. * * I have not even received an unkind look from the volunteers, but on the contrary they have made me shed tears of satisfaction when listening to their consoling speeches. And let no one believe that I write this with the intention of obtaining my liberty from these calumniated volunteers, as I am perfectly aware that they will have to execute the sentence of the Supreme Court, whatever it may be."

The point is obvious that PARODI remains a prisoner of the volunteers, and no power in the land can save him, unless the volunteers are willing.

A VILE SYSTEM OF WARFARE.

The following will illustrate how the war is carried on in Cuba, and I may limit myself to a single case among many: A detachment of colored soldiers operating in the Cinco Villas captured an insurgent named CLEMENTE SILVERIO, and was taking the necessary steps to send him to the next world, when SILVERIO proposed to the commander of the troops that if he would spare his life, he would lead him to a camp where five insurgents were bivouacking. The offer was accepted. The detachment marched from the Loma de Cruz to Santa Fé, where the five men were found and immediately executed. SILVERIO must now remain with the Spaniards, who of late have begun to publish the names of their guides and spies, thus compelling them to and where they operate and whether they are employed as garrisons or in moving about on field service. Your correspondent is enabled to furnish you with an exact and accurate report regarding the number of troops in each jurisdiction, which includes all men belonging to the regular army, counter guerrillas and mobilized volunteers, but does not include the different volunteer corps in every section of the island. The forces are distributed as follows:

Departments.	No. of men.
Cinco Villas	8,611
Sancti Spiritus and Moron	6,465
Havana	2,167
Vuelta Abajo	877
Matamoras	1,559
Puerto Principe	9,389
Eastern Tunas	11,920
Total	40,779

To illustrate the manner of their distribution, I take the Cinco Villas, where 2,375 men are continually moving about the country, while 6,236 do duty in garrisons and on plantations to prevent them from being destroyed. The number of such posts or detachments in the Cinco Villas alone is 150. Even if the 13,000 men come from Spain, the strength of the army will not be materially increased, as at present the army already contains 4,000 men whose time has expired, and who will return to Spain as soon as they can. Fully 2,000 more will also be exempt from further service by that time or pay the customary tribute which the climate of Cuba exacts of foreigners.

HEALTH OF HAVANA.

Although Havana does not record any cases of sun-stroke, the vomito, small-pox and cholera are amply making up for any deficiencies in that respect. The average daily number of deaths from yellow fever is about thirty-five, from small-pox fifteen, and from cholera about forty; this, of course, does not include deaths from other sickness. The wife of Gen. CARBO and the daughter of Gov. ROBERTS are ill with fever, but the latter is out of danger. It is probable that all the high officials will leave Havana for Marianao during the next two months.

QUASIMODO.

POLICE AFFAIRS.

Trials of Delinquents—Promotions, Transfers, and Retirements.

The labors of the General Roundsmen produce so many charges that the Police Commissioners are overwhelmed, and one person is no longer able to investigate the complaints as fast as they accumulate. As a consequence Commissioners BOSWORTH and BRENNAN held court in separate rooms, yesterday, and by their united exertions, thus diversely applied, managed to dispose of a calendar comprising 110 cases, all of which, with a few exceptions, emanated from the Grand Roundsmen. As a rule, the complaints in themselves, and the evidence adduced to support them, seemed sufficiently serious to justify the accusations, and in this respect were a decided improvement upon some of the former achievements of these officials. The bulk of the complaints were for standing in conversation while on patrol, which is a habit no amount of discipline seems able to cure patrolmen of. Some few cases were more serious, the offenders being charged with being off post, in restaurants or other places, the excuse in such cases being invariably of a plausible character, and one which it is impossible to disprove, although the Commissioners rarely fail to show that they are credulous in regard to it. The charges of talking on post are always met by a flat denial of the time thus consumed, or it is claimed that the conversation is on Police business, and witnesses are generally produced to substantiate the excuse.

At a meeting of the Board of Police, held in the afternoon, Commissioners BOSWORTH, BRENNAN and SMITH being present, Capt. JAMES GREER, of the Ninth Precinct, was retired on a pension of $1,000 per annum, the excuse for the act being that he is so broken down in health as to be unfit for duty. The vacancy was filled by the appointment of Sergt. WILLIAM H. CLINCHY as Captain. The promotion of this officer has been more rapid and with less reason than that of any other member of the force. Lately he was a Roundsman of the Sixth Precinct, and was made Acting Sergeant when JOURDAN was made Superintendent and KENNEDY Captain. Afterward made full Sergeant, and transferred to the Tenth Precinct, he was soon given another post in being placed in command of one of the squads of Grand Roundsmen, and during all of the promotions has displayed fair average ability as a policeman, but has done nothing to account for them. CLINCHY was sent to command the Twenty-first Precinct, vice MCDONNELL, transferred to the Twenty-eighth in place of Washburne, sent to the Ninth to fill the void left by the retirement of GREER. The Board also retired, at their own request, Sergt. ZEPHANIA C. SMITH, of the Eleventh Precinct, at a pension of $750 per annum, and Patrolman STEPHEN C. BAKER, of the Thirteenth Precinct, at a pension of $350.

Colored Labor Convention—Object of the Meeting.

The New-York State Labor Convention of the colored citizens, is to be held at Saratoga on the 24th inst., a postponement from the 7th having been made for the purpose of hearing of the action of the Cincinnati Convention. In the call for the Convention, signed by WILLIAM F. BUTLER, President, and about forty other prominent colored men of the State, the object of this meeting for conference of the labor question, is set forth in the following terms:

"In view of the urgent demands now pressing upon the people of all classes for a proper settlement of the conditions of labor in its various departments, and especially as relates to that portion of the people hitherto deprived of the apportionment of its benefits, both as regards the employment of skilled labor and an opportunity to acquire a knowledge of the mechanical branches—and in view, too, of the many avenues necessarily open for such acquirement and employment on the part of those who have controlled the admission of apprentices and workmen in the workshops of the State to the exclusion of the formerly disfranchised class, but now happily enfranchised; and in view, too, of the great demand for skilled as well as unskilled labor in the future altered and regenerated state of society in our new free State and free country, the undersigned, impelled by motives of the highest consideration for the welfare and development of our whole country, and the enlarged privileges of every class, do invite a Convention of the colored citizens of our State, as well as others interested in the labor question, to assemble at Saratoga, N. Y., on Wednesday, Aug. 24, 1870, for the purpose of adopting such views and plans, as shall not only bring out the needs of the people, but tend to enlarge the privileges and dignify the position of general labor."

Delegates are invited to bring with them statements of all persons engaged as artisans, mechanics, farmers, or any other industrial pursuits of whatever kind, in the several counties, also educational statistics, gathered from official or other sources; as well as a list of work-shops where workmen are admitted without distinction of color.

Excursion to the Western Wilds.

A company of gentlemen is now forming in this City to make a trip to the Plains, kill a buffalo and return. They will leave shortly, some of them going as far as Salt Lake City before they return, while others will visit the natural beauties of Colorado, stopping for a while at Monument Creek to examine the wonderful freaks of Nature, taking a sleigh-ride in August on one of the peaks covered with eternal snow, gathering moss agate, cornelians, and other precious stones, from the streams; drinking of the soda, alum, sulphur, magnesia, and other mineral waters, and winding up the amusement by whipping the trout-streams, or shooting a buffalo, elk, deer, mountain sheep, antelope or grizzly bear. The excursionists will be allowed thirty days, and will be furnished with tickets over the Pacific Railroad at very greatly reduced rates. The regular rate to Denver and return is $97 50; the excursion rate will be $60 95. From Omaha to Salt Lake, the regular fare is $158 80; the excursion rate will be $99 75. The excursion from this City is now making up, and will, in all probability, start in a few days.

Iona Island to be Sold.

It is understood that Iona Island, so well known as the resort of pleasure parties and excursionists from this City and vicinity, will soon be offered for sale, and that preparations are in progress to bring the scheme to the notice of the public, full particulars of which will soon be published. The island is situated in the Hudson River, near West Point, and is already handsomely laid out. A full description of the attractions offered is unnecessary, as the place has long been a favorite visiting point for Sunday-school and church pienics, moonlight excursions and other parties of this character. Whether the proposed sale will result in the island becoming a fashionable resort, or remaining in its present state, a delightful spot for transient pleasure, is, of course, uncertain, and it is also not improbable that such arrangements may be concluded as to make it a desirable location for private residences. That the island will soon change hands is a fixed fact, but, as has been said, its future destiny is as yet a matter of uncertainty.

THE TURF.

The Saratoga Second Summer Meeting—The Programme of Racing.

The second Summer meeting of the Saratoga Racing Association commences on Friday, the 12th inst., and will continue over six, and probably seven days; an extra day's sport being in progress of arrangement. There are three races on each day, and over $14,000 is given by the Association to be run for. The July meeting was a decided success, and there is every reason to anticipate that it will become an event of annual recurrence. The August meeting, which is held in the very height of the fashionable season, is certain to be equally successful. The racing on Friday commences with the Kenner Stakes for three-year olds, $500 entrance, half forfeit, with $3,000 added, two miles. For this race there are twenty-five entries, so that if only five horses start, the stake will be worth to the winner $10,000 net. The horses entered are Mr. BELMONT'S Telegram and Nellie James, Mr. DOSWELL'S Eclipse, Mr. SMITH'S Rejected, Mr. LITTELL'S Maggie B. B., Mr. SANFORD'S Preakness, DENISON & CRAWFORD'S filly by Censor, dam L'Anglaise, Mr. GOTTRILL'S Fireball, HUNTER & TRAVERS' Scathelock, Col. MCDANIELS' Belmont, Mr. O'FALLON'S Governor Bowie and W. R. Travers, Mr. HALL'S Major, Capt. MOORE'S Foster and McCloskey, MCCORMACK & PAGE'S Hamburg, Mr. BABCOCK'S Mary Foster, Mr. MORRIS' Remorseless and Temptation, BACON & HOLLAND'S Lynchburg, Mr. MCCONNELL'S Chatillothe, CLARK & GRINSTEAD'S Flash of Lightning, G. CADWALLADER'S Australian filly, dam Dolly Morgan, A. BUFORD'S Enquirer, and J. FRANKLIN'S Lady Petry. Of this lot, the probable runners are Enquirer, Hamburg, Remorseless, Telegram, Chillicothe, McCloskey, Governor Bowie, Major and Belmont, and one of the most interesting races of the season may be looked for when these great racers meet. The second race is the Summer handicap for all ages, two miles and a quarter, $250 each, half forfeit, with $1,000 added. The weights were announced to appear on Aug. 1, but they have not been published. Among the thirteen entries we notice Legatee, (now called William M. Tweed.) Tasmania, Corsican, Nannie Douglas, Helmbold, Mozart and Narragansett, but the two last are certain non-starters. A purse of $400 for a three-quarter-mile dash, all ages, closes the first day's sport.

A steeple-chase opens the second day's racing, followed by the Kentucky Stakes for two-year olds, one mile, $100 each, half forfeit, with $1,000 added. There are forty subscribers, and among them public performed youngsters engaged in it are His Lordship, Idaho, Virginia Dare, Aureola, GRINSTEAD'S Sally Lewis filly, and KEENE RICHARDS' Knight of St. George colt. A selling race terminates this day's sport. On the third day we have two free handicaps for all ages, at a mile and three-quarters, and three-quarters of a mile, and a race for three-year olds exclusively. On the fourth day is a hurdle-race handicap, a two mile and three-quarter race, and a mile and a half dash for all ages, carrying 100 pounds. Two free handicaps on the fifth day and a handicap for two-year olds comprise the sport, while on the sixth day there is a race for horses that have run and not won during the two meetings, a four-mile race, and the Consolation Purse, with allowance of weight for beaten horses. In addition to this programme, we learn that it is intended to offer a large purse to bring together Hamburg, Enquirer and Kingfisher. Such a race would be highly exciting.

CRIMES AND CASUALTIES.

A North Carolina Case of Theft and Pocket-Picking—Deaths from the Heat—Suicides and Accidents.

On Saturday, the 29th ult., officer THOMPSON, of the Twenty-seventh Precinct, proceeded to arrest JOHN H. EVERETTE, alias Willy Davis, in obedience to a warrant issued by a Magistrate in Weldon County, N. C., on the affidavit and complaint of JAMES H. MAGEE, Sheriff of that county, who accused the prisoner of having escaped from his custody, and having received a quantity of goods that had been stolen by a gang of negroes from freight cars on the Weldon and Petersburg Railroad. EVERETTE was arraigned before Justice HOGAN, at the Tombs, on the same day, when the Sheriff stated that the prisoner was a well-known desperado, and had shot one of his deputies. A revolver was found on the person of the accused, and officer THOMPSON alluded to the defiant conduct of the man when arrested by him. Although there was some informality in the warrant, the Magistrate decided to remand him until a requisition could be procured from Gov. HOLDEN. The document arrived yesterday, in the hands of Sheriff MAGEE, who obtained his prisoner and started for home by the noon train.

Officer MCMILLAN, of the First Ward, at a very early hour yesterday morning, detected PATRICK O'BRIEN, a laborer, in the act of smashing a window of JOHN LEONARD'S liquor-store, at No. 1 State-street, where he had only succeeded in stealing an empty bottle, valued at 10 cents. Despite the insignificant value of the plunder, Justice HOGAN held him for burglary, and fixed the amount of bail at $1,000, in default of which O'BRIEN was locked up.

MARY GANNON, of No. 156 Mott-street, fifty-six years of age, attempted to steal $41 from the bosom of ANN CUFF'S dress, at No. 35 Mulberry-street, while the owner was asleep. ANN felt the hand of the thief, and waking up, found her money in the hand. MARY was arrested, and when brought before Justice HOGAN at the Tombs, she was duly committed for trial.

NICHOLAS SLATER died suddenly yesterday, in a shanty in Fifty-second-street, near Tenth-avenue, from the effects of the heat.

GEORGE MORGAN, residence unknown, died suddenly in the street from the heat. His body is at the Morgue.

JAMES THOMPSON, the hotel thief, arrested on Tuesday at French's Hotel, was arraigned before Justice HOGAN, yesterday, when Mr. FINNEY, one of the victims already mentioned, made a complaint against him. JAMES W. ANDREWS, of No. 68 Pine-street, also appeared, having seen the description of the stolen articles in the TIMES, and fully identified the two gold watches, the sleeve buttons and the studs, and stated that on the 5th inst. his room, at the Englewood Hotel, had been entered and the above property stolen, together with $15 in money and a suit of clothes, together valued at $405. The prisoner had the clothes on his person when arraigned. The Magistrate held THOMPSON for trial on these additional charges. Capt. ALLAIRE, of the Fourth Ward Police, has still in his possession an Odd Fellow's gold pin and a gold pencil-case, for which no owner is wanted.

HENRY HOLMES, of No. 111 Broadway, caused the arrest of THOMAS WILSON, yesterday, for a larceny from the person. Mr. BROWN was passing through Wall-street, near Broad, when WILSON and another man jostled him, and at the same time he saw a hand glide into his coat pocked, which proved to be WILSON. He seized the thief who dropped Mr. BROWN'S pocket-book, which was carried off by the confederate. Mr. BROWN subsequently stated that the pocket-book contained stock shares and promissory notes of the face value of $30,300 besides $20 in ready money. When arraigned before Justice HOGAN at the Tombs, WILSON was fully committed.

AARON E. ABRAHAMS, of No. 454 Fourth-avenue, was passing through Chatham-street, yesterday, when he felt a tug at his vest pocket, and saw that his gold watch valued at $40 had been taken, the chain hanging loose from his button-hole. At the same time he saw a man, who afterward gave the name of FRANK DENIKE, running away, so he pursued and arrested him, finding the watch in his possession. Justice HOGAN held the accused for trial.

Yesterday afternoon, as EDWARD MCCONNELL, of No. 39 Lispenard-street, was standing on the rear platform of a car in Church-street, he suddenly felt his silver watch jerked from his pocket, and saw HENRY MULLETT jump off at the same moment. He pursued the fugitive, who ran into a Franklin-street store, but was overhauled and arrested. Justice HOGAN considered the evidence sufficient to hold the prisoner, so remanded him for trial.

CHARLES RAPHAEL, a well-known offender, was arrested, yesterday, by Detectives TILLY and WOOLDRIDGE on a charge of aiding in the larceny of $6,000 worth of diamond jewelry from NATHAN TANNENBAUM, of No. 416 East Ninth-street. The complainant went into the saloon No. 33 Chatham-street, on Monday, and hung up his coat, in a pocket of which was the diamond jewelry. He met the prisoner, and, happening to know him, entered into conversation. One of the boys in the saloon informed the detectives that two men had been near the coat just before the larceny was discovered, and the three men evidently acted in collusion. The complainant also remembered that RAPHAEL had forcibly turned him round from where his coat hung. The accused was arrested from description, and Justice HOGAN decided to hold him for trial in default of bail.

CLEMENT REED, a native of the United States, thirty-six years of age, residing at No. 98 Ludlow-street, yesterday, attempted to commit suicide by stabbing himself in the left breast with a pocket-knife, but succeeded only in causing a wound which is considered slight.

A fire which is supposed to have been caused by an incendiary, was discovered yesterday in the Red House, corner of Second-avenue and One Hundred and Fifth-street, but was extinguished before much damage was done.

JOHN SNEDER, of No. 293 Seventh-avenue, while hanging iron doors yesterday, at No. 347 Washington-street, had his right shoulder-blade fractured by one of the doors falling upon him. He was taken to the Park Hospital.

Homes in the West—Work of the Children's Aid Society.

An unusually large company of bright-looking boys and girls left the office of the Children's Aid Society, yesterday, in charge of an agent, to be provided with permanent homes in the West. Although large parties of orphan and homeless children are sent West by this Society twice every month, the number of applicants for employment and homes does not in the least diminish. Every day brings its quota of miserable youths, with their plaintive and pitiable stories. Father and mother dead; no home; sleeping in the Station-house or in the street; hungry and nothing to eat; temptation to steal, and so forth, and the usual burdens that oppress their young hearts and minds. Before the party left for the depot, Mr. MACY, the kind-hearted Assistant Secretary of the Society, gave them some excellent advice, and said he had just received a letter that was full of encouragement to every boy in the room. It was from a young man who, nine years ago, stood in the Society's office a little boy, covered with rags, without a home or friend on earth. He now wrote that he was going to visit New-York and thank the Society for what it had done for him. Before he left for the West, he promised Mr. MACY that he would always speak the truth, and never take what didn't belong to him. That promise he had kept; he had been happy and successful in his Western home, and made many friends. During the past two years he had been engaged in teaching, and was about to enter college with a view to entering the ministry. Mr. MACY assured the boys that there were positions of honor and usefulness ahead of every one of them, which he hoped they would aspire to and ultimately attain.

WEDNESDAY, Aug. 10—P. M.

There was a further fall in the Gold sales, this forenoon, from 118¼, as the price left off last night, down to 116⅞ ₱ cent. The Cable news of the morning probably had less to do with this fresh decline than the intrinsic weakness of the Bull speculation in the Gold Room. There were rumors in the Street of further successes of the Prussian Army on the Rhenish frontier. These were not authenticated up to 3 o'clock, but the market, nevertheless, continued weak. A belief seemed to have possessed the Street that the War is drawing to an early crisis and to a triumphant close on the side of Prussia, and a coincident rise in the English Funds, reported by Cable, contributed to this opinion. Another source of weakness to the Gold Room was the discovery of gross misrepresentations, late on yesterday, of the extent of the shipments by the steamers today, there may have been no design in the unexpected representations that the total engagements would reach nearly a million and a half of dollars, but they were from such respectable sources that we, among other reporters, relied upon them as substantially true. It was nearly two o'clock today before the real amount could be arrived at, the Russia was then reported as taking out $703,000 and the Minnesota $50,000. At the close of the day there was something approaching a panic among the sellers of Gold.

Some of the Bankers in the Foreign Exchange were disposed to advance their terms on London this morning to 109¾ and 110⅛ for 60 days' and sight Bills, respectively, but there was little or nothing done at the advance, and our quotation of yesterday for short sight is not altered from 110⅛ ₱ cent. as the representative figure of actual cash sales. The unusual ease and cheapness in the Money Market here, however, are rather calculated to make the Bankers indifferent to drawing upon their balances abroad, where the rates of interest are from 5 to 6 ₱ cent.

At the Treasury today $2,415,000 Gold was bid for, and $1,000,000 awarded on account of the Sinking Fund. Many of the bids were below the open market at the hour, while the amount proved quite up to the subsequent ruling of the Gold Room. Tomorrow, (Thursday, noon,) the Treasury will buy $2,000,000 U. S. 5-20s. The Funds at the Stock Exchange today advanced to 109¾ ₱ cent. for the 5-20s of 1867. The 1862s were not quite so firm as yesterday. Other descriptions firm at the close.

The awakening in the Railway Market, noticed for some days past, appears to be confirmed and prices strengthened today, although current report that the chief parties in interest in New-York Central, Lake Shore, and some other of the active Stocks are out of town. It may be that the telegraph between Saratoga Springs and Wall-street is kept well employed, and that large orders are given in this way to buy the Vanderbilt Stocks, among which Lake Shore: from the largest interest held by Mr. VANDERBILT'S friends, is now reckoned. Another story is that part of the Erie Ring, separating themselves from the mountebank performances of FISK, Jr., are desirous of making their peace with New-York Central, to make money on the Vanderbilt Stocks, and to restore "Erie" to respectability by throwing FISK, Jr., overboard. This last will probably be found an achievement easier threatened than executed. FISK, Jr., may be a bad fellow,—"which nobody will deny,"—but it seems rather late in the day for JAY GOULD to attempt the "virtuous" or his co-directors like LANE and TWEED to essay the "respectable." Aside from the talk about these people bulling the Vanderbilt and other stocks, we discover other signs of an advancing movement in the market, and late this afternoon the indications of an important rise in prices are stronger than at any time during the present week.

After the late Boards, the following quotations were made as compared with Tuesday night. The Gold market weak; the Railway speculation very strong, The Public Funds firm. The latest Cable telegrams in the Street were significant of important news to-morrow:

NEWS OF THE DAY.

THE WAR.

A London dispatch announces the arrival in that city of the Prince Imperial of France, in charge of the Emperor's confidential agent, together with the Empress' jewels and valuables, and the famous diamonds of the Duke of BRUNSWICK. A Paris dispatch denies that the Prince Imperial is in London, and says he is still at Metz. The Prussians, in advancing, discovered that the losses of the French have been frightful. The official accounts of the engagement near Saarbrück received in Berlin show the battle to have been of much greater importance than at first reported. FROSSARD'S corps was dispersed, the camp of one division and many magazines were captured, and prisoners by the thousand were taken, and are still hourly being taken. The French have disappeared from all points in front of the Prussians. London dispatches also say the losses of the French are beyond all estimate. The progress of the Prussians is impeded by villages filled with wounded French soldiers. The French Seventy-seventh Regiment, engaged in the fight at Saarbrück, was annihilated; only four officers and eighty men reported after the fight. The prisoners captured are described as multitudes. All efforts to make a stand against the victorious enemy was ineffectual, and their cavalry picked up the retreating Frenchmen by the score. Wounded correspondents with the French armies are beginning to arrive in Paris and testify to the valor of the French troops. The chaplain of Marshal MCMAHON'S corps was killed in the battle of Woerth. One correspondent is still missing. No military operations, according to Paris accounts, have taken place since Saturday. Marshal BAZAINE made a reconnoissance in which he unearthed some Prussian Uhlans, who were attacked and driven back by French hussars, with trifling loss. The reverses of the French are attributed to the military incapacity of the Emperor. Gen. DUMONT will have command of a Division of the French Army. Gen. CHANGARNIER'S interview with the Emperor, at Metz, to offer his services, is said to have been satisfactory. The Duc D'AUMALE has also offered his services to the Emperor, says a London dispatch. The dispatches from Paris received in London represent the wildest excitement as prevailing in and about the Corps Legislatif at the session of Tuesday night. Deputy KERATRY demanded that the Emperor should be deposed. Outside the people had assembled in multitudes, and defied the efforts of the troops to disperse them. The Garde Nationale threw down their arms and fraternized with the crowd. Charges were frequently made by the cavalry, but the scattered throngs returned the moment the troops retired. A large number of arrests were made. A Paris dispatch says a dictatorship is spoken of, with Gen. TROCHU as the head. The Emperor has been invited to return to Paris and await the reorganization of the Government, but his refusal is said to be certain. Another dispatch says he will return dead or victorious. The ladies of Paris make stirring appeals for aid for the wounded. FELIX PYAT was condemned for offering a toast "la balle," supposed to cast ridicule upon the incident connected with the Prince Imperial's presence at Saarbrück. The Berlin bankers decline to take the Prussian loan, but the people invest freely. The Opera-house in Berlin has been given up to the ladies' sewing societies and for hospital purposes. A volunteer naval force is being organized there. During the session of the House of Lords yesterday the subject of Belgian neutrality was discussed, and the statements of the Government were regarded with satisfaction. The treaty of neutrality was read and loudly cheered. The Queen's speech was then read by royal commission, and Parliament was prorogued till Oct. 27. Expressions of regret upon the breaking out of the war in Europe are made in the speech, and the Queen promises to direct constant and anxious attention to strict observance of the duties and rights of neutrality. It sets forth that the circumscription of the area of the war, and the restoration of peace, shall occupy the attention of the Queen, and efforts will be made when opportunity presents. The treaty guaranteeing the neutrality of Belgium has been signed by the representative of North Germany, and the French Envoy has signified that he is authorized to sign it, and other Powers, parties to the treaty of 1839, are invited to accede to the engagement.

GENERAL EUROPEAN NEWS.

The result of the yacht-race in New-York Harbor for the Queen's Cup, as first announced in London, was that the Cambria had won. The defeat is, however, acknowledged, not, however, without a tinge of regret. One paper says: "The Queen's Cup stays beyond the ocean, where it has been twenty years."....Mr. THORNTON, British Minister to Washington, has been made a Knight Commander of the Bath....The London Times regards the early restoration of the financial equilibrium as due to the possession of the telegraphic cable.

GENERAL.

The Ohio Republican State Convention was held in Columbus yesterday. Gen. ISAAC R. SHERWOOD was nominated for Secretary of State by acclamation, Judge GEORGE W. MCILVAIN, Supreme Judge, and Gen. WILLIAM T. WILSON, for Controller of the Treasury. The proceedings were entirely harmonious.

A singular accident occurred on the Kansas Pacific Railroad on Tuesday night. An iron train, heavily laden, getting beyond the control of the men, ran into a stationary train and crushed several cars. Six persons were killed and several wounded. The killed are supposed to be Mexicans who were sleeping under the train.

HORACE S. GRISWOLD, County Judge and Surrogate of Broome County for fifteen years, and a prominent member of the Bar, died on Tuesday evening at Binghamton, aged fifty-seven years.

Ex-Secretary SEWARD left Auburn, yesterday, for San Francisco. There he will be joined by several parties and start with but little delay for China and Japan. Quite a crowd of his fellow-citizens saw him off, and cheered him lustily.

The first bale of Alabama cotton of the new crop was sold at auction at Montgomery, Ala., yesterday morning, at 35 cents per pound. It classed as low middling, and weighed 495 pounds.

The Superior Court at Hartford, Conn., has affirmed the same gentlemen appointed by Massachusetts receivers of the Boston, Hartford and Erie Railroad, to take charge of the unfinished portions of the road in Connecticut, and of the Norwich and Worcester Road.

EDWARD MALTBIE, a young man nineteen years old, committed suicide at his father's house in Hartford, yesterday, being depressed in mind at his failure recently to pass examination at West Point.

The Athletics beat the Harvards at Philadelphia, yesterday, by a score of 27 to 9.

The Latest News.

Order prevails in Paris, and the people are evidently becoming more and more united in defense of their country. The fact, however, that the Prince Imperial has been sent to London, and that the Empress's jewels have been sent with him, betrays the distrust of the future which exists in the inner Imperial circles. It is palpable enough that the French troops were outnumbered in the recent engagements—but it was very bad generalship to allow them to be outnumbered at that point. The truth is that the armies collected by the Emperor for the campaign were no match for those of the North German Confederation. The disposition of them was as bad as it well could be. The Germans are better soldiers than the French—not more gallant, perhaps, but more intelligent, and more familiar with their duties, to say nothing of their being much more efficiently officered. This was a great drawback to France to start with, and the mistakes of the Generals—perhaps we should rather say of the Emperor—made a great reverse a certainty instead of a probability.

As an indication of the unanimity which prevails in Paris in regard to the prosecution of the war, it is worth while to notice that Deputy KERATRY, one of the most inflexible of all the "Irreconcilables," has brought forward a proposition in the Corps Legislatif for an extraordinary levy of troops. It would probably be as much as any Deputy's life was worth to propose the relinquishment of the struggle at this stage. The assurances which have reached us from one or two bitterly-prejudiced sources, that this war was unpopular in France, are put to confusion almost every hour by the news which comes from Paris. The Provinces as well as the capital are overflowing with enthusiasm. Everywhere the people are crying "a bas la Prusse"—a very easy thing to cry, but a very difficult feat to accomplish. We believe that the German Armies cannot be permanently defeated. The utmost NAPOLEON can hope for is that the war may be so protracted as to leave both Powers in a condition of willingness to receive overtures of mediation from England. It is questionable, however, whether the Empire will survive to witness that result. Meanwhile, the new Ministry has been formed, and all the measures proposed for strengthening the army have been adopted. France is of one mind about carrying on the war.

What the Emperor Napoleon Might Still Do with Advantage.

The first great defeat of the French has involved the sacrifice of a Ministry. A repetition of the disaster may cost a dynasty. When NAPOLEON entered upon the present war, no man alive knew better than he that the penalty of failure would be the overthrow of the Empire. His bitterest enemies in England plainly perceive, in his opening addresses to the nation and the army, evidence of his extreme dejection. A task was forced upon him by public opinion which he seems to have felt it would be alike fatal for him to accept or refuse. The French people have long been eager to provoke a trial of strength with Prussia. The "Rhine frontier" is the most cherished of all their dreams. Since 1866 they have been more and more afraid of Prussia. The Spanish intrigue was discovered, and the excitement of the French could no longer be controlled. "The people have slipped out of my hands," was NAPOLEON'S remark to an English correspondent who saw him. M. THIERS, an unprejudiced witness, says, in a letter published in the English papers, he had "always been of opinion that the time would come when the ambition of Prussia would have to be resisted by France." But he admits that his countrymen could not be restrained. He does not say the Emperor could not be held back—but his countrymen. Impartial history will probably record that the French people forced the war on NAPOLEON, if not to his own destruction, at least to his imminent peril.

We may well afford, while sympathizing with the Germans in this contest, to observe with careful eyes the events which are now taking place in the world—events which have never been exceeded in importance since the French Revolution, and which are destined, as we have always believed, to change the whole current of modern European history. To suffer ourselves to be misled by the ignorant cries of wild fanatics would be unworthy of us as men who are living in times destined to stand out in history with terrible significance. We may be against France in this struggle, but it is not necessary to insult France by asserting, as one of our contemporaries has done, that all the French troops are drunk when they march to the war, and that the people are bitterly opposed to it. Let us, at least, as public historians, tell the truth frankly, no matter where our sympathies may be. If we believe that Germany is in the right, that is no reason why we should garble the news which finds its way into our columns. As for NAPOLEON, what does his life signify in this gigantic struggle, one way or the other? He is but an accident of the hour. Strike him out of the scene altogether, and this war would be waged with tenfold intensity on the part of France—for then the great present cause of political differences would be removed, and every man in France would rise to beat back the tide of invasion. But while the Emperor remains there are divisions where all should be unity. If NAPOLEON were to abdicate at this moment, and leave the war to be conducted by other hands, he would assist France infinitely more than he can do by pretending to lead her armies. His health is bad. His spirits are broken. By abdicating he would stand in a better position before the world than he can hope to do now, even although an accident might give him a great victory. For he is charged with being the sole cause of the war, and the London Times, for instance, asserts that if he were out of the way the war would cease. The predictions and statements of the London Times throughout our own war were so remarkably accurate, and so manifestly dictated by a love of truth and fair play, that we cannot fail to attach the greatest importance to its suggestions now. Its opinion is scarcely less decisive than the "opinion of Antwerp," concerning which, by the by, the cable has not kept us properly informed since Monday.

In any case, NAPOLEON, by withdrawing from the scene, would put the question to the test whether or not the war hinges solely upon him. This is, perhaps, the most favorable termination to his rule which he can reasonably look for. If he did not make this crisis, it is all the more reason why he should not attempt to control it. He is a cause of weakness instead of strength to the country. France may be beaten under an Emperor, but it has always been found impossible to reduce her under a Republic. Politically, indeed, Republics do not flourish on French soil. They end in bloodshed and anarchy. But they at least have always known how to defend the country. The people know what they are fighting for when a Republic bids them to advance against an invader. In 1792 Frenchmen could turn aside from their own Revolution to sweep back the Austrian invaders. Prussia would find her antagonist fifty-fold more formidable if a Republic were declared to-morrow. She might still conquer, but her task would be more difficult. As for the restoration of the ORLEANS family it is a hopeless chimera. There will be no King in France until a Republic has had yet another trial.

Fall of the Ollivier Ministry.

From the moment that war was declared against Prussia, the existence of the Ollivier Cabinet was in danger. Representing a policy which attempted to steer between the extremes of contending factions, they failed to receive the hearty support of any party. The Republicans distrusted them, and the Imperialists envied them the possession of official rewards to which they imagined themselves to have a better claim. But as the two main divisions of the Chamber detested each other rather more cordially than the constitutional party, with M. OLLIVIER at its head, which stood between them, the adhesion of either could generally secure the majority which was required to carry through measures which leaned now to the one side and now to the other. Had the state of peace continued with which the year opened, the Ministry might have lived long enough to cultivate an aptitude for constitutional Government among French statesmen, and to familiarize the country with the usages of parliamentary rule. That this would have been a fortunate thing for the Emperor and his dynasty can scarcely be questioned. Personal Government has, doubtless, accomplished many things for France, but it has not been favorable to the growth of able statesmen. The minority of a boy, and the regency of a woman, are conditions of rule which could only subsist with national affairs under the conduct of men trained to administration under the influence of free institutions. But above this minor necessity rose the still greater one of vindicating the strength of the dynasty before France and before Europe. The plebiscitum confirmed the title of the "elected of the millions," but it also made audible an ominous undertone of "Noes," and showed that the French soldiery were no longer single in their devotion to the conqueror of Solferino. The moment had come when, to use the remarkable language of M. DE GIRARDIN, written in 1868, we were to look, "on the part of the Emperor, for an act of virility, for a supreme effort which should replace him in the high position in which the Congress of Paris had placed him in 1856."

Here, then, was a point on which Frenchmen of all shades of politics seemed to be alike agreed, that France must fight, and here, also, was a question on which both Imperialists and Republicans could unite in demanding a strict account from the Ministry of M. OLLIVIER. A concession to popular freedom might be carried with the aid of the one party, and against the votes of the other, while a vindication of the Imperial prerogative might be made by the process being reversed; but the conduct of the war presented a common standing ground for all the opponents of the Ministry, and one from which they could operate without compromising their mutual hostility. France had held a high tone toward Prussia, and had conducted her diplomacy with her hand on the hilt of her sword. The inference, therefore, was that France was prepared to strike surely and swiftly. The Ministers had spoken at once the sentiments of the Emperor and the people, and their momentary popularity was great. They had gone to war like men who knew that their resources were boundless, and that their preparations were worthy of the united nation at their back. The Minister of War assumed the supreme command of the army, and the very existence of the Cabinet was staked on the success of the troops that went forth with scarce a suspicion of possible defeat.

M. OLLIVIER was well known to be a disciple of TURGOT and COBDEN, and certain utterances of his in the Corps Legislatif on the 18th May, 1868, were doubtless remembered in July, 1870. "Many people think," were his words then, "that there is a question of honor to be settled between France and Germany, and that war has become a necessity. In my opinion war would be a disaster. * * In vain would you be victorious, in vain you might drive back Germany and obtain possession of the Rhine; after victory you would be less able to disarm than before the war. * * The true solution is peace, but peace with disarmament, peace with liberty, with that liberty without which peace is neither glorious nor sure." But M. OLLIVIER had changed not a few of his sentiments, and it seemed probable that he had changed these too. But now, when it becomes apparent that France has gone to war worse prepared than her adversary, that the disunion she calculated to find in Germany does not exist, and that a policy which "has lacked foresight when it was necessary to look before, and decision when it was necessary to decide," has brought the invaders once more on the soil of France, the popular indignation demands a victim, and the Ollivier Ministry is overthrown. The censure may be aimed at the Emperor through his nominal advisers, but it is noticeable enough that the new Cabinet promises to be more Imperialist than the last. The successful military adventurer, COUSIN MONTAUBAN, Count of Palikao, seems marked out as head of the Cabinet, holding the office of War Minister, and JEROME DAVID, a representative of the Arcadians, or extreme Right, of the Chamber, is named as the Minister of the Interior. CLÉMENT DUVERNOIS, the proposer of the resolution adverse to the Ministry, is also an exponent of Imperial policy, while M. MAGNE, the new Minister of Finance, was one of the earliest public servants of the Empire. Should a Cabinet be formed on such a basis it is obvious that the existence of the Napoleonic dynasty becomes more intimately bound up than ever with the issue of the present war. Fresh defeats may demand fresh sacrifices, and the immediate adherents of the Emperor will scarcely fall without necessarily leaving the way open for the Republicans. The day of compromise and coalition is evidently passed, while France stands united as one man to repel the invader who holds possession of her soil. The three great parties which divide the people will be found, when the crisis is over, sternly facing each other, and ready for an intestine struggle which may be as sanguinary as the foreign war which preceded it.

The Congressional Committee's Address.

Senator WILSON and his fellow-members of the Congressional Committee have struck the right chord in their address to the Republican Party. With the loftiest appreciation of the party's history, they would establish its title to victory in the approaching campaign by demonstrating its capacity and will to satisfy the existing wants of the country. They refer to its origin, and its early struggles with the slave power, to its preservation of the Union, as the result of a war which tested statesmanship quite as much as soldierly skill, and to its restoration of the Southern States on the basis of justice—as proofs of fidelity in the discharge of the great duties which have been forced upon it. There is no exaggeration in the claims to the nation's gratitude, as thus presented by the Committee. A party whose record bears conclusive testimony to its firmness in support of principle, and its ability to administer the affairs of the Republic at the most critical period of its existence, may fairly invite confidence in its power and purpose to accomplish the work which yet remains to be done.

How varied that work is, and how closely connected with the re-establishment of financial soundness and industrial and business prosperity, the Committee clearly show. They recognize as before the party, awaiting its action, if the people shall sustain it, "questions relating to the national debt, the currency, finances, and taxation, to reforms in the military, naval and Indian service, and whatever remaining burdens and legacies were left by the war." The statement is comprehensive enough to satisfy all reasonable expectations. Nor are the difficulties to be encountered underrated or ignored. "Concerning these questions," remark the Committee, "there are apparent diversities of interests, and real differences of opinion. The solutions of some of them are embarrassed by grave difficulties," and most certainly, "they require time as well as financial skill and practical statesmanship for their adjustment." These declarations are in the right spirit. There is no vain boasting in them—only an honest and intelligent estimate of the value of the work that is still before the party.

So far as taxation and expenditure are concerned, the Republican Party has already done sufficient to prove that it is on the right path. In saying this we are not required to indorse every act of the Administration, or every measure of Congress. The Committee frankly admit that "expectations have not been fully realized in the action of either the President or of Congress." Nevertheless, they properly add, enough has been achieved to satisfy critical Republicans "that the difficult problems will be wrought out, and the hoped-for results accomplished." The large reduction of taxes is incontestable, whether the accompanying Tariff changes be approved in all respects or not; the greatly increased efficiency in the collection of revenue is none the less a fact because the internal revenue service is yet susceptible of amendment; the economy which has been enforced in various departments of the Government is not impaired by the continuance here and there of Congressional extravagance; and mingled humanity and justice are not less apparent in the President's Indian plans, because those plans are still imperfectly developed on the Plains. These are portions of the work which the Committee present to the country as unfinished,—they are creditable features of a policy whose complete application will be best insured by the maintenance of Republican supremacy at Washington.

Yachting Matters.

The race for the Queen's Cup, on Monday, settled the question of the possession of that much-coveted trophy for the present, and probably for some time to come. Although the Cambria made a gallant struggle for the prize, we have, undoubtedly, a number of yachts able to beat her over the course of the New-York Yacht Club, even after making due allowance for the bad start, and the mishaps of the English yacht. Still, Mr. ASHBURY does not intend to allow our boats to rest in the undisturbed possession of their laurels. He proposes to issue invitations for several sea-races, and is especially desirous of again testing the sailing qualities of the Cambria with the schooners which came in ahead of that vessel on Monday last. We sincerely hope he may be accommodated in this matter. Although the appearance of the Cambria afloat is not in accordance with our American ideas of beauty in marine architecture, her lines under water are very fine, as was generally acknowledged by all who saw her when she was lying in the dry-dock.

A race between the America and Cambria would be particularly interesting, as showing the progress the English have made in yacht-building during the past twenty years. Judging from Monday's race, our shipbuilders are not likely to suffer from such a comparison, for the America then came in number four in a fleet of eighteen, outstripping some of our fleetest yachts, and that, too, under circumstances which, in the opinion of those who know her best, were not calculated to bring out all her best qualities. The Captain who sailed the America twenty years ago still thinks "she could beat everything in the water if rightly rigged," notwithstanding her age. There are, moreover, a number of other experienced sailors who think the America was not in good racing trim last Monday, and who do not hesitate to assert that she can still beat England's best yacht. The only way to determine this question is to arrange a race between them, which we hope will be done if possible. While we believe that there are other yachts than the Sappho in our waters able to beat the Cambria, even with a favorable breeze and a course of her own choosing, Mr. ASHBURY may carry back with him to England more trophies than that he won in his race across the ocean.

The behavior of the Dauntless in her race for the cup satisfied everybody, and surprised not a few who witnessed her performances here two years ago. The changes made in the stepping of her foremast, and in other particulars, have improved her sailing qualities, which were always good. We hope an effort will be made to arrange a match with the Cambria, the Dauntless, the Sappho, and, if possible, the America. Such a contest would be memorable in the annals of yachting, and it may be many years before an opportunity will again offer of bringing together such a famous quartet. The present season has had a most brilliant opening, and if all the future races are marked by the same spirit of fairness and mutual courtesy which characterized the first, Mr. ASHBURY cannot grudge us any prizes we may win from him, while any trophies he may receive at our hands will carry with them our sincere admiration for his spirit as a yachtsman, and our appreciation of the frank equanimity with which he accepts either victory or defeat.

The foreign illustrated papers which arrived by the mail yesterday present sketches of the scenes in Paris on the departure of the troops. From these pictures it might be supposed that the French people entered upon the war with enthusiasm. Fortunately we know better. The only paper which has special dispatches, &c., told us on the 26th July that "troops marching through Paris to take trains for the seat of war traverse the streets without eliciting a single cheer. Soldiers joining their regiments walk about in groups, almost all drunk. The bourgeois stare at them and shrug their shoulders." This veracious testimony settles the question forever, and prevents us being misled by these mendacious French and English illustrated papers, which are not "fully represented" at the seat of war.

Without attempting to review the proceedings at the Coroner's inquest on the late Mr. NATHAN until they are closed, we may say that the evidence thus far taken completely exposes the falsity of the wicked charges brought against the sons of the murdered man. It will also impart extraordinary interest to the examination of WILLIAM KELLY, the housekeeper's son. It is desirable to extract from this young man all the information he can possibly have to give. His testimony may turn out to be the most important yet produced during the investigation.

The tone and tactics of Gov. HOLDEN'S organ, the Raleigh Standard, are simply infamous. If its purpose were to provoke civil war, it could not be conducted differently. Referring to Judge BROOKS' issue of a writ of habeas corpus in behalf of some of the prisoners whom HOLDEN'S man, KIRK, keeps in military custody, without other warrant than the Governor's arbitrary will, the Standard uses this language:

"Is Judge BROOKS ready to involve the people of North Carolina in civil war? Does he suppose Gov. HOLDEN will recede before him? * * The Governor will not recede until the Federal Army is used against him; and the Federal Army will not be used against him. We are on the eve of civil war, and when it begins all the blood and all the horrors of it will be on the skirts of Judge BROOKS."

We suspect that HOLDEN'S desire is to provoke the state of things he pretends to deplore. Having enabled the Democrats to secure a triumph in the late election, he would now precipitate the State into civil war that he may obtain pretexts for invoking Congressional interference. Should trouble come as the result of HOLDEN'S impudent attempt to set himself above the law, the country will hold that he, and he alone, is responsible for it. The Republican Party cannot too soon or too emphatically repudiate both the man and his doings.

Parliament adjourned yesterday, after the delivery of a "Queen's speech" which is as meaningless as those documents usually are. In exacting a pledge from Prussia and France for the preservation of Belgium, the Government appears to think that it has done everything within its power. The talk about the "secret treaty" appears now to have quite died out. The publication of the document in the Times was, we believe, accomplished in this way: Count BERNSTOFF, the Ambassador of Prussia in London, received the treaty in the handwriting of M. BENEDETTI from Count BISMARCK. It was handed to the editor of the Times by M. BISMARCK'S orders, and, having been copied, the original document was at once returned to Berlin. The editor of the Times informed the English Ministers of the source from which he derived his information, so that when questioned about it in Parliament they were unable to deny its authenticity.

On the 8th of this month one of the millions of special correspondents of the Tribune, now scattered over Europe, startled us all with the following telegram from Paris: "Something serious, which I cannot fathom now, has taken place. Something more serious than I know of must have happened this evening." As the Tribune is the only paper which gets news from abroad, this staggered everybody. What could the mysterious "something" have been? Was it possible that the Emperor was found singeing his backbone again with a lighted candle—a process which a Tribune correspondent saw him go through on a former occasion? The "something serious" turned out, after all, to be a nightmare of the diligent correspondent's. It is too clear, however, that our contemporaries, the Herald and the World, may as well put the shutters up. We, none of us, as we are informed every morning, have correspondents at the seat of war, except the Tribune. It would be no use if we had, for the modest London correspondent of that journal telegraphed, yesterday, "I expect dispatches from the two correspondents of the Tribune, at the Prussian head-quarters. Before their arrival, anybody pretending to give details must furnish mere scraps from stragglers." We are very thankful the dispatch did not read, "anybody pretending to give details will be instantly executed."

When the Richmond State Journal finds it necessary to warn Republicans that the policy of hate and proscription will not enable them to carry the South, we recommend them to listen as to an unimpeachable radical witness. The North Carolina election has aroused the State Journal from a dream, and it speaks plainly. It tells the Republican Party that it commits a fatal mistake when it "depends alone on the colored vote," and alienates "all [Southern] men of wealth, intelligence and influence." Hitherto the party, in its management of Southern matters, has persisted in "proscribing the majority of the people." This course must be changed, and the WHITTEMORES and PORTERS, who have disgraced the party and the States they have pretended to represent, must be discarded, or—our Richmond contemporary asserts—"there will not a single Southern State be Republican in 1872." The warning is in time for our guidance in the coming Fall campaign. It is so manifestly sensible, and so completely in harmony with facts, that prudent Republicans will give it their careful attention.

The tedious and uncertain process by which the poorer class of sufferers from "accidents" are compelled to seek redress is a subject of frequent remark. Large numbers of persons are deterred from making any effort to obtain just compensation, knowing, as they do, that a long purse carries the day against them. If railway and other companies could be induced to agree upon some uniform system of compensation for loss of life or disablement, it is probable that suits in the Courts might in most cases be avoided. A report recently introduced into the British Parliament proposes to effect this object by legislation, so far as railways are concerned. It fixes the limit of liability at £1,000 for first-class passengers, and proportionate sums for second and third class. The plan has its recommendations, not the least of which is that poor persons who sustained injuries would be certain to secure some pecuniary redress.

Would it not be well for some of the friends of the working man, who devote so much time to confusing politics with political economy, to revive the little-discussed subject of co-operation? We read of the North of England Co-operative Wholesale Society, that during its last quarter's business it has sold goods amounting to £127,188, by means of 302 minor societies, realizing a saving to the members of £1,373. In addition to this, the articles supplied—tea, coffee, butter, sugar, and general provisions—were all of the first quality. Here is a clear practical benefit which working men have secured to their families by a simple form of association. The example may be commended to our own people, who have a genius for organization in other directions, but who have as yet done little to develop the co-operative principle.

Personal.

Hon. C. E. Ingersoll, of Illinois; Hon. John A. Griswold, of Troy; Gen. Fullerton, of St. Louis; Marquis de Chambrun, of Washington; E. L. Plumb, late Consul-General at Havana, and Walter Montgomery, the English tragedian, are at the Fifth-avenue Hotel. Ex-Gov. Price, of New-Jersey, is at the St. James Hotel. Gen. A. A. Humphreys, U. S. A., is at the Hoffman House. Judge Coleman, of Alabama, is at the New-York Hotel. Senator Cole, of California, and Ex-Congressman Kellogg, of Alabama, are at the Metropolitan Hotel. Ex-Post-master-General Randall, Gov. English, of Connecticut; Hon. John Lynch, of Maine, and A. B. Mullett, of Washington, are at the Astor House. Judge Bartley, of Washington; W. Prescott Smith, of Baltimore; Hon. W. P. Deucklay, of Arkansas, and R. R. Springer, of Cincinnati, are at the St. Nicholas Hotel. Capt. S. C. Glynn, of the British Army, and Commander Read, U. S. N., are at the Brevoort House.

Gen. JAMES B. MCKEAN, recently appointed Chief Justice of Utah, is in this City, having returned from Washington, where he had final consultation with the President and Attorney-General AKERMAN regarding the condition of affairs in that Territory. The Judge will leave in a few days for his new field of duty.

Chinese Labor—Fifty More Coolies for North Adams, Mass.

The Springfield Republican, of the 9th inst., has the following: Mr. SAMPSON, of North Adams, is so well pleased with the result of his introduction of Chinese labor into his shoe-factory, that he will, within a few weeks, send for fifty more workmen from California. Of the seventy-two Chinamen he has now at work, all but four or five are doing finely; the incompetent ones he will send back to San Francisco. These Orientals continue peaceable, industrious, quiet and eager to learn, and in every respect pleasingly contrast the other foreigners, who, under the Crispin organization, have almost ruined Mr. SAMPSON'S business in the last few years. There are now many who can talk intelligible English who could not utter a word when they arrived here, and, save a few exceptions, they show a very accessible and teachable spirit. A Sunday-school is carried on in the factory. The recent visit of two of their countrymen, A. SHOWN, the prosperous Boston tea merchant, and another in the same business at Cambridge, was very beneficial to them. The merchants arrived on a Saturday and spent Sunday with them, explained to them the character and condition of the Crispin Order, their own position, their duties and prospects, and left them quite enlightened and still cheerful. A. SHOWN, by the way, has married an American wife and permanently settled here. It should be mentioned, as a commentary on the ignorant Crispin cry about "taking the bread from our children's mouths to feed aliens," that there are now more laborers employed in the shoe business in North Adams, exclusive of the Chinese, than before the strike.

WITH THE FRENCH ARMIES.

More About Thionville—Vigilance of the Gendarme and the Authorities—Talk of the Peasants—Soldiers About the Villages—Marshal Bazaine's Head-quarters.

From Our Special Correspondent.

METZ, Wednesday, July 27, 1870.—A. M. The tower of the ancient chateau of the Counts of LUXEMBURG, built, it is said, in the tenth century, and commonly called the Tour aux Puces, is all that remains of Thionville of the Middle Ages. The fortifications of the town, which were laid out by VAUBAN and CORMONTAIGNE, have been enlarged and repaired on different occasions, and now present the form of an irregular heptagon, with half-moons protected by detached works, &c. When I reached Thionville I found every street in the town swarming with troops. At the Hotel du Commerce, which appears to be the only respectable hotel in the place—which, nevertheless, numbers 7,376 in habitants—it was quite out of the question to think of finding a servant. People who arrived on horseback, like myself, or in light carts, were obliged to attend to the stabling of their cattle, and even to feed them—and every room in the house was crowded with military men engaged in satisfying the cravings of the inner man. In the court yard were a large number of officers and civilians waiting their turn—which puts one in mind of the queue outside of a Parisian theatre during the run of a successful piece—and every minute others arrived to swell the crowd.

TRIALS OF STRANGERS.

Finding that the chances of obtaining dinner diminished in proportion as the hour advanced, I wandered into the town, and after considerable search succeeded in finding a small auberge in a by-street, where, after some persuasion, they consented to give me a dinner at double the ordinary price. I had hardly been seated five minutes when a gendarme, who had evidently been dogging me about the town, entered the room, and at once picking me out of a score or two of people, requested me to show my papers. This I did, and after some discussion, during which every one in the room managed to put in a word, the representative of authority decided on leaving me to eat my dinner in peace and quietness. In the course of the evening I met a French journalist, who told me that twice during the night he had been awakened by loud knocking at his door, and that on opening it he found himself face to face with the Mayor of the town, wearing his tri-color scarf, and accompanied by several gendarmes, who insisted on seeing his papers, and subjecting him to a cross-examination in spite of the advanced hour of the night.

TALK OF THE PEASANTS.

I endeavored while at Thionville to ascertain the number of troops quartered in the neighborhood, but found it utterly impossible, as the peasantry, after the second question answered "yes," or "no," or "I don't know," to everything I asked them. Finding that at Thionville there was no chance of obtaining lodging for the night, I decided on returning to Metz, and as the bill was tolling to warn the inhabitants that the gates were about to be closed for the night, I passed out of the town. I had hardly proceeded a quarter of the distance when my horse fell lame, and I was therefore compelled to walk him the remainder of the way. About half way along the road I fell in with a breeder of poultry returning home from market. He appeared very dissatisfied with the war, as a number of Germans, he told me, owning factories in the neighborhood had left the country, and although he sold a considerable quantity of fowls and ducks at the present moment, he foresaw that when the troops marched forward that he would be absolutely without customers. In the course of conversation he told me that at Sarr-louis, which is a German fortified town, about twenty-six miles, as the crow flies, east of Thionville, the inhabitants would be only too glad to become French subjects. The story is that at Sarr-louis there is a café composed of two large rooms on the ground floor, in one of which there is the bust of NAPOLEON III., and in the other that of WILLIAM of Prussia. The Germans always sit in that which has NAPOLEON'S bust, and it appears that there are so many of them that when French travelers go to the café, they find their room so crowded that they are obliged to sit in that which has the bust of the King of Prussia.

IN THE WAKE OF MARSHAL BAZAINE.

The night before Marshal BAZAINE left Metz for Boulay a large number of peasant's wagons, which had been put into requisition for the transport of provisions and baggage, assembled on the large square in front of the esplanade, where they were loaded during the night and in the course of the following day. Between 4 and 5 in the morning Marshal BAZAINE left for the front, and a few hours afterward I hired a dog-cart and followed in his wake. I left Metz by the Porte des Allemands, and leaving the Fort Doublecouronne de Bellecroix on my left, proceeded along the Saar-louis road. A few hundred yards from Metz I came upon a body of about 200 soldiers and workmen busily engaged in digging trenches and throwing up embankments. At a little more than two miles from Metz one leaves on the right the road to Forbach and Saarbrück. The road to Boulay, bordered with tall trees on either side, runs through a pretty, irregular and wooded country, where corn and potatoes appear to be the principal things cultivated. The first village of any importance is Les Etangs, situated at a distance of ten miles east of Metz. The villages here, like in the neighborhood of Thionville, consist merely of one street, being built for the most part of plaster or mud-houses, roofed with tiles. Some few hundred yards before reaching Les Etangs we came upon eighty-two baggage, provision, and forage wagons which had left Metz in the morning. The peasantry who drive these vehicles, and who are also called into requisition by the Government, are mostly fine-looking fellows, wearing in front of their caps or straw hats a small card bearing this inscription: "Third Corps—Train Auxiliaire."

The vehicles themselves consist merely of the flooring, as it were, mounted upon four wheels, with a wooden railing on either side. They are drawn by two and four horses, and carry for the army, at the present moment, sacks of flour and rice, cases of biscuits, and small barrels, the contents of which I was unable to ascertain, as the peasantry regarded me with so much suspicion. On entering the village, on the left hand is a large piece of ground resembling a common, which bore the traces of a recent encampment. At the auberge bearing the sign of "The Swan," where I stopped to water my horse, it was impossible to obtain anything but bread and beer, the soldiers who had passed through it in the morning having eaten up everything in the place. It was here that I learnt from an old woman that we were only eighteen miles from Prussia.

BETWEEN LES ETANGS AND BOULAY.

Between Les Etangs and Boulay nothing worthy of note occurred, with the exception that hidden behind trees and out-houses, I saw numbers of soldiers fast asleep, who had evidently partaken somewhat too strongly of the small beer of the neighborhood, and had fallen in the rear of their regiments to sleep off its effects. Not far from Boulay men were at work commencing the telegraph line and railway which is to follow the French Army, I am told, during its march, but only a few yards of it are, as yet, finished. Boulay, which is situated at a distance of about eighteen miles north-east of Metz is an unfortified town of

and in the neighborhood, is something tremendous, and almost every day others leave Metz in that direction. On entering the town we find them encamped in the open air on either side of the road. On the left and the right I counted eighteen batteries of artillery encamped close to the road, while beyond these, on the right, was the infantry encampment. The cavalry are encamped at the extreme end of the town behind the church. It is quite impossible to give the correct number of troops quartered at Boulay, but I am told that there are about forty thousand. Others are to leave in that direction early on Friday morning.

BAZAINE'S HEAD-QUARTERS.

The Hotel du Lion d'Or, where Marshal BAZAINE has established his head-quarters, is crowded with officers, and, as at Thionville, the town is swarming with troops. In any of the towns occupied by the French Army, it is only with the utmost difficulty that a civilian can obtain anything to eat in a public room. At the Hotel du Lion d'Or, at Boulay, which is the only hotel in the place, the whole of the rooms were let to the army, the hotel-keeper being forbidden to let even a bed in the dining-room to a civilian. Having the choice of a "shake down" in the hay-loft and my bed at the hotel at Metz, I decided in favor of the latter, and as I told you in my last letter returned to Metz, through a smart thunder-storm, to await the arrival of the Emperor.

Attempt to Frighten Correspondents—The Emperor's Movements—Entre of the Army—The Followers—Cool Reception by the People—The Soldiers Sullen and Quiet.

From Our Special Correspondent.

METZ, Wednesday, July 27, 1870—Night.

The report of the death of the correspondent of the London Times, which I mentioned in my letter of yesterday, turns out, as I anticipated, to have been false. It was set afloat, it is thought, by the military authorities, to frighten the other newspaper correspondents who are here. The Secretary of Marshal LEBEOUF, whom I saw this morning, tells me that there is no truth in it whatever, and authorizes me to contradict it in the most formal manner.

MOVEMENTS OF THE EMPEROR.

The Emperor is expected to arrive here at 7 o'clock to-morrow night, that is to say, if he is sufficiently well, and as I have noticed several luggage vans in the town belonging to the Imperial household, as well as a great many servants wearing the Imperial livery, there is every reason to suppose that the report is true, the more so as a portion of the Imperial Guard, among whom are the Grenadiers and the Zouaves of the Guard, have just arrived here from Point-à-Mousson, about twenty miles on the road to Nancy, which they left the day before yesterday. The new arrivals consist of the Second and Third Regiments of the Grenadiers of the Guard, one Regiment of Zouaves of the Guard, six batteries of artillery of the guard, among which is one battery of mitrailleuses carefully incased in water-proof coverings, making in all thirty-six pieces of cannon; one squadron of the Empress' Dragoons, and one squadron of Hussars of the Guard, or Guides.

THE ARMY FOLLOWERS.

In the rear of the troops were the luggage-vans, the surgery, consisting of medical boxes containing all the necessary instruments and ointments for amputating limbs and dressing wounds, slung across the backs of horses, the cantine carts of the different regiments, and the cantinieres in peg-top trousers and short petticoats. These ladies are for the most part very stout, with very fat round faces, but among them there was one attired in the uniform of the Zouaves of the Guard, who was quite a child and remarkably pretty, and who naturally attracted a considerable amount of admiration, among the crowds of people gathered on either side of the street. When I remembered that a fortnight ago the Faubourg St. Denis, along which the troops passed on their way to the railway station at La Chapelle, was literally strewn with flowers, which people threw down by handsful from the windows, I was somewhat surprised that there was no attempt at a manifestation.

COOL RECEPTION OF THE ARMY.

The soldiers, fatigued, after a twenty miles' march along a dusty road, especially those on foot, moved sullenly through the streets, while the motley crowd, gathered on either side of their path, passed not very complimentary remarks on the personal appearance of some of them, and occasionally wondered to each other what the Prussians would say when they knew what was in store for them. But not one of the spectators had sufficient enthusiasm or sufficient admiration for the men who were going to risk their lives for the honor of their country to encourage them with a cry of "Vive la Garde!" or "Vive l'Armée!" The officers in the service of the Grand Duchy of Baden, who were brought in as prisoners to Metz, have changed their uniform for private clothes, and breakfasted this morning at the table d'hôte at the Grand Hotel de l'Europe.

READY FOR WORK.

Everything now appears to be ready, with the exception of Prince MURAT'S regiment, which has no tents on account of the Colonel not having been able to purchase what was necessary before marching, and there is every probability that within the next few days we shall have news of some very smart skirmishing between the two armies. In the meanwhile the newspaper correspondents—principally English—who are still here, are in a terrible fix as to what course to pursue. Some talk of passing into Luxembourg and remaining either on the Prussian frontier or joining the Prussian Army, where it appears that journalists are far better received than in France; others are endeavoring to get attached to a cantine in the capacity of scullery men; others have requested to be allowed to nurse and attend the wounded; others propose forming a "Journalists" corps, and following in the rear of the French Army in an omnibus. I omitted to mention that a large number of infirmary vans left today for Thionville by rail.

Arrival of Artillery and the Remainder of the Imperial Guard—No Enthusiasm Manifested by the People.

METZ, Thursday, July 28, 1870.

Last night, between 12 and 1 o'clock, a large body of artillery arrived and proceeded at once to the camp. This morning, about 10 o'clock, the remainder of the Imperial Guard, consisting of Chasseurs á Cheval, Lancers of the Guard, Empress' Dragoons and the Guides, in all twenty-eight squadrons of cavalry, arrived from Pont à Mousson. There was no cheering or manifestation on the part of the people, who are probably so used to seeing the military defiling along the streets, that they pay no attention to it. The Emperor is expected at every moment, and I shall keep this letter open until the train leaves, to let you know whether he has arrived or not. If he arrives, as is expected, I shall send you a detailed account of his reception by to-morrow's post.

NAPOLEON AT HEAD-QUARTERS.

Departure of the Imperial Party from St. Cloud—Formal Leave-Taking of the Empress and the Ministers—The Emperor's Confidence in the Success of His Cause.

From Our Own Correspondent.

PARIS, Friday, July 29, 1870.

The real opening of the military campaign between France and Prussia dates from today. The Emperor reached the head-quarters of the French Army, at Metz, at 6 o'clock last evening. Telegraphic dispatches announce his reception as enthusiastic—the "Marseillaise" sung by the people. There was no speech from NAPOLEON. A body of Cent Gardes escorted the Imperial party to the Prefecture.

THE DEPARTURE FROM ST. CLOUD.

The Emperor at 10 A. M. left the palace of St. Cloud. The Prince Imperial, Prince NAPOLEON and a military suite, composed of the following persons, accompanied him: Gens. de Beville, de la Moskowa, Castelnau, Wanbert de Genlis, Reille, Fave, Pajol, Canu, Aids-de-Camp; Gen. Courson de la Villeneuve, Adjutant-General of the Palace; Captains Nepp d'Hendicourt, Dresse de Morcourt, ordnance officers; Vicomte Lepic, Sergeant-at-Arms of the palace; Col. Tascher de la Pagene, Sergeant-at-Arms; Comte Davilliers, de Saint-Jean, D'ANGELY, first masters of horse. Messieurs RAIMBAUX, SUAREZ D'AULAN and DE MASSA, ecuyers. Doctors CONNEADS, CORVISAIT and LARREY; M. FRANCESCHINN PIETRI, private secretary, and Vicomte PIERRE DARU, courier of the Cabinet.

The suite of the Prince Imperial is composed of the following gentlemen: Major LARREY, Capt. CLARY, Aids-de-Camp; Messieurs BACHON and D'AURE, ecuyers.

The Emperor's departure was strictly private. Even the inhabitants of St. Cloud were not aware of the exact point from which the Imperial party would set out. An impression prevailed that the Emperor, with his entire suite, would pass in state through the City to the Eastern Railway Station, giving the people an opportunity of a solemn leave-taking. Great disappointment was felt when it became known that the Imperial train would start from the Orleans gate of the Park of St. Cloud, from whence a railroad (that which surrounds Paris) leads to the Strasbourg line. From 9 o'clock in the morning, carriages commenced to arrive at the palace from Paris, conveying the military suite who were to accompany the Emperor, and all the Ministers with the exception of Marshal LEBEOUF, (already at Metz,) to take leave of their head, and finally the Princess CLOTILDE, accompanied by Prince NAPOLEON. At 9¼ the Emperor, the Empress, the Prince NAPOLEON and the entire Imperial household abovementioned left the palace by the door of the "Salon de Mars," and proceeded to the train in waiting. The Emperor first took leave of the Ministers, then kissed the Empress and took his seat in the Imperial wagon, followed by the Prince NAPOLEON. When the Prince Imperial had taken his seat, the Empress got in the wagon and remained near her son until the moment of departure. At 10 o'clock precisely the train moved; the Empress, Princess CLOTILDE and the ladies in waiting remained at the station until it was out of sight, when Her Majesty, who up to this moment suppressed her emotion, burst into tears. She returned to the palace, the Princess CLOTILDE remaining with her the greater part of the day.

THE EMPRESS AND THE PRINCE.

Ever since it was resolved that the Prince Imperial should accompany his father, the Empress has been occupied in preparing her son's military outfit. With her own hands she put every needful article of dress and toilet in its place, while the young Prince, so early called into military life, looked on, extremely pleased with the additional importance acquired by his new position as a soldier ordered on active service. The day before the departure the Empress, accompanied by the boy and one lady in waiting, drove to Paris and spent an hour in prayer for the victory of the French arms and for the safe return of her husband and son in the Church of Our Lady of Victory, (Notre Dame des Victoires,) at whose shrine former Queens of France have knelt when left by their royal husbands in days of battle and of peril.

APPEARANCE OF THE EMPEROR.

The Emperor wore a serious, but by no means an anxious expression at the moment of leave-taking. His Majesty is fully impressed with the magnitude of the contest which is about to begin. An impression prevails both in England and America that the war will not be of long duration. This idea is founded on the marvelous improvement in artillery and arms of all descriptions, and is partly justified by the rapidity of the Prussian conquest in the war with Austria. But I can assure those who entertain that idea that it is a fallacious one. The present war is undertaken under very different circumstances from any previous one. The point at issue is the supremacy in Europe, and the two nations which are now face to face are the first military Powers in the world. The contest must, therefore, be a rude one. The Emperor indulges in none of the illusions which the official Bureau of Publicity would fain encourage in the public mind. He says plainly in his proclamation of this morning—the text of which is probably being read in New-York at this hour—that "the war which is now commencing will be long and trying." At the same time, his confidence in the success of the French arms is unwavering.

NOTES FROM ENGLAND.

Course of Neutral Powers—The Recent Demonstrations in Ireland—Conduct of Frenchmen and Germans at the Outset—The Implements of War—Plans of the Germans.

From Our Own Correspondent.

LONDON, Wednesday, July 27, 1870.

It seemed to me of little use to hurry to the seat of war while troops were concentrating, and no movement could be made for at least ten days or a fortnight. The French commanders are quite determined to have no risk from correspondents. The German newspapers are adjured by their Government to give no news of military movements. Up to this moment the chief interest of the war is diplomatic. As soon as the earnest work of the campaign begins I hope to be nearer the scene of conflict. In the meantime I gather what I can of interest from all quarters.

POSITION OF FOREIGN NEUTRAL POWERS.

Europe is taking sides in the contest so strongly that it seems as if every country might sooner or later have a hand in the war. I thought at first that Holland might sympathize with Prussia. Not at all. All the Hollanders I know are on the side of France, and dread nothing so much as being swallowed up by the new German Empire. Prussia wants sea-coasts and harbors, and BISMARCK long since proposed to the Emperor to allow her to appropriate the Netherlands. The Emperor told him that for Prussia to touch Holland would be to make war on France. "It must come to that at last," thought the Prussian Minister; and he is blunt enough at times to have said it. If Holland were to take part in the war it would not be on the side of Prussia. But Belgium, you might think, fearing only annexation to France, would favor Prussia. Not at all. Belgium has far more dread of being gobbled up by Germany. The Belgians have a pride of independence; but if they must be annexed to any country, they wish to be French. Some Englishmen, passing through Belgium a few days ago, tried to fraternize with some Belgian officers, and were astonished to find themselves repulsed almost with rudeness. They were mistaken for Germans, going home to fight. As soon as they were known to be Englishmen they were warmly welcomed. There are great numbers of Belgians who wish their country to be annexed to France—few, if any, who would prefer to be joined to Prussia.

THE DEMONSTRATIONS IN IRELAND.

Out of the Press there have been few manifestations of sympathy for either side in England, whose interest is so strongly neutral. Not so in Ireland. The demonstrations in Dublin have been followed by similar ones in Cork and other places, and Ireland goes with France in any case, and all the more if England takes sides against her. If England should send an army to aid Prussia, she would need to send another to keep the peace in Ireland. The feeling of Ireland finds moderate expression in the following, in the Dublin Freeman, which is also the best statement I have seen of the causes of the war from a French point of view:

"The King of Prussia appeals to the judgment of mankind against the Emperor of France, and English journals are lost in admiration of the Christian sentiment that he invokes the judgment of Heaven upon him who 'drags two great peace-loving peoples in the heart of Europe into a devastating war.' Has he no reason to tremble at that judgment which he invokes? Has he not dragged peace-loving peoples into war? Has he forgotten 1866, when he set German against German. Has he forgotten what the Italian Minister openly stated in the Chambers that, before the outbreak of the war with Austria, arrangements had been made with Prussia, then professing friendship for Austria, which exhibited a moral gravity of which there are few instances recorded in history? Prussia should be the last to appeal to the judgment of the world. France was a party to the Treaty of Prague. At first Austria refused to accept it, but she yielded on the solicitation of France. From that day to the present Prussia has systematically violated its stipulations. The offensive and defensive treaties with the South German States were not included in nor did they flow from the treaty; but Count BISMARCK, who never omitted an opportunity of wounding French susceptibility, flaunted his diplomatic triumphs in the face of France, as if he sought occasions for war. He has war now, and before long he is likely to regret the arrogance that provoked it. France will not sheathe the sword until the pretensions of Prussia are curbed and 'autonomy' is restored to the States, of which they had been deprived by her lust of conquest. France has right on her side, and with a million of the first soldiers in Europe to enforce it, there can be little doubt of the result."

CONDUCT OF FRENCH AND GERMANS.

There is a curious difference between the conduct of French and Germans in the outbreak of this war. France, we are assured on all sides, moves as one man. All parties join—the nation sings the "Marseillaise" in full chorus. But there is not the spirit of bitter, personal hatred that exists in Germany. Germans in England are holding meetings, and going home to fight. Frenchmen in England are very quiet, and few, I think, are returning home. The German Governments, it is true, compel all Germans of the military age to return, under heavy penalties. No such call comes from France. Prussia has given notice that any German fighting in the French Army will, if taken prisoner, be shot. There are many German soldiers in the French Army, and especially in that portion just brought home from Algeria. There may be many Germans in or from Hanover and Frankfort, for example, who love France more or hate her less than Prussia. Frenchmen in Germany are said to meet with rough treatment. One account says no Frenchman is safe. Germans in Paris, and there are thousands, are not in the least molested. They meet at their own cafés, and discuss the war in peace. Their chief trouble at present is the difficulty of getting German beer; but that can come round from Vienna, as it comes to London—and far better than any made in England.

THE IMPLEMENTS OF WAR.

The means of destruction ready to be used in this war will give it a new character, and were it possible for men to live without fighting, might, after a few experiments, put an end to war altogether. The French improvement on the American Gatling gun, which we saw at the Paris exhibition, is a terrific engine, pouring a hail-storm of death at a long range. The Emperor has studied and perfected it. In one experiment five hundred horses were killed in a minute and a half. Their torn carcasses made a pestilence, and since then the trees of the forests have been used as a target. Hundreds of these engines are now distributed to the army. It is claimed that the Chassepot has an effective range nearly one-third greater than that of the needle-gun. What have the Prussians on their side? We hear of balloons which are to shower down balls of gutta-percha filled with nitro-glycerine. A Paris soap manufacturer is said to be in a state of great remorse for having sold, the past year, a large quantity of glycerine to Prussia. Prussian artillery is admirable; we saw splendid specimens of it at the Exhibition of 1862. I cannot think that Prussia is at all behind France in the machinery of destruction. I doubt, however, if a Prussian Army can be equal to a French one, just as I doubt whether militia and volunteers can, for all the purposes of a campaign, be as efficient as a well-organized regular army. But we shall soon see the experiment tried on a grand scale—though people grow impatient of delay, and think the French are losing an advantage by not striking at once. I think they will strike, the moment they can, at three points simultaneously, and I shall be surprised if in two out of those they are not at first successful. The Emperor declares that he was hurried into the war, that France could be restrained no longer. It is clear that neither BISMARCK or the King of Prussia made the least effort for peace.

PLANS OF THE GERMANS.

But if one may credit the news from Germany I mean the letters of correspondents—the Germans will not wait to be invaded. The plan of Prussia is to mass an army of seven hundred thousand men and march on Paris. Paris is not half so far from the frontier as Berlin; the country offers fewer obstacles. There are some advantages in prosecuting a war upon the enemy's territory, and you spare your own. The fields and vineyards of the Rhineland may be saved by devastating those of France. The Germans have great confidence in their Danish strategist, VON MOLTKE. Shut up in his cabinet at Berlin, in 1866, he directed the invasion of Saxony and Hanover, and defeated BENEDEK in Bohemia. They believe that he has no match in Europe, and that he has already on his table a plan of strategy which will bring the war to a successful termination. France, probly, has plans as well, but the one I have seen in La Liberté may not be the one finally adopted. It is this:

"Make a rapid advance in Hesse in order to neutralize the South German States, occupy and fortify Frankfort, sweep the Prussian territory on the left bank of the Rhine, then enter Westphalia, and, being supported by Hanover and Denmark, drive the Prussians beyond the Elbe, and subsequently, as after the battle of Friedland, reconstruct the German Confederation, to the exclusion of Austria and Prussia."

AUSTRIA AND RUSSIA.

Austria seems determined to remain neutral in every contingency. It is not an armed neutrality like that of Belgium, nor an observant one like Italy's—it is simply passive. There are no unusual military movements, and even the ordinary ones are suspended. The sympathies of the Austrian populations are said to be for France, but some exception may have to be made to this in Austria proper, where the population is German, and where there may be some degree of sympathy even with their late enemies. It is said, however, that there are no indications of such sympathies. Russia is persistently declared to be Prussian, and the French believe that she has already joined their enemy. Prussia may serve Russia, no doubt, as against France and England, in the solution of the Eastern Question, but Prussia is becoming a very formidable rival. With a larger navy she might close the Baltic. Then there is the "sick man" at Constantinople, and there is an Eastern Question beyond, about which England at times grows uneasy. Poland, perhaps—the Polish populations of Russia, Austria and Prussia, might in certain contingencies count for something—and France has been the friend of Poland, though too distant to give her effectual assistance.

NAPOLEON'S PREDICTIONS.

In 1839, LOUIS NAPOLEON wrote a remarkable work, Les Idées Napoléonnes, in which he gave a prophetic glance at the future wars of Europe. He said:

"One nation is urged on against another, and the one is employed to accomplish the subjection of the other. The French took the Italians from the yoke of Austria; Germany and England remain neutral, for what do they care about the Austrians in Italy? That is the first war. When the power of Austria is broken, then comes the turn of neutral Germany and Prussia—without Austria, but with the aid of the Italians. That is the second war; by which the German question, the Rhine and Danish question, the Scheldt alluvium question—that is, the incorporation of Belgium and Holland in France—will be solved. The third war will be directed against England. The object or pretext will be to free the oppressed nationalities, the Irish and Scotch, as well as the colonies, from the English rule—to break the power of England on sea, and to dismember Great Britain. Whatever Power can dispose of ships-of-war must help. Then the great Western Empire of the Napoleon dynasty will be complete, and the other half of the world, the Eastern Empire, is Russia, against which, after she has been the ally and the auxiliary, the last war will be declared."

The second of these wars has begun. Are the rest to follow? The first NAPOLEON said that in fifty years Europe would be Republican or Cossack. Prophets are apt to hurry things. The French soldiers going to the front call the Germans Cossacks. The end of this war may be the union of France and Germany—of all Western Europe—against Russia, or Eastern Europe and Asia. In these complications America is scarcely mentioned. At the Cobden dinner, Mr. GLADSTONE said: "I rejoice to think that a great Power, who has capacity to weld an entire Continent into a single State, is also represented on this occasion." A compliment to which Mr. JOHN BIGELOW responded, and said he thought the events at Washington the past Winter showed that the days of protection were fast drawing to a close.

DURATION OF THE WAR.

How long will it last? I cannot hope that it will be a short and sharp war. A defeat on either side will only enrage the defeated and call new armies into the field. The Emperor may wish for peace, but it is not the Governments but the peoples who have made this war. An English writer says of it:

"The great American war is the only one which appears to me to bear any resemblance to the present in intensity of hatred, in personal bitterness, in the immensity of the operations. That war was exactly like this, and I can see but the same issue for it, namely, a prolonged and desperate struggle until the utter exhaustion of one or other of the contending nations. But in America there was no possibility of the complications which must arise here. Upon the northern continent there was no other Power to interfere between the contending parties or to give aid to one or the other, and Europe remained neutral. But it is almost impossible to believe that the present struggle can be continued with the same animosity and to the same length, without some nation or other becoming involved in it. The issues are too great, the interests too intimately connected. It is this which makes me feel convinced that we are at the beginning of a great European war."

The French are showing their power of organization and instinct of order in a manner which seems quite remarkable to English observers.

One writes that:

"Although throughout the twenty-four hours crowded trains of immense length are following each other in rapid succession, and crossing each other as they near the frontier, the troops being carried to the various possible points of attack or observation along it, I have not yet seen the slightest symptom of mismanagement or confusion. Everything goes on as methodically as if the present arrangement were of every day occurrence."

The Prussian railway system is also very perfect.

I do not see how interference in favor of Belgium can be prevented, if it is ever called for; but England is not prepared for war. The volunteers are not armed with breech-loaders, the field artillery is deficient, the troops have never been trained to the most important operations of war. The navy is strong, but Belgium cannot be defended with ships. The English Press is irritating France, and one little article in the Times goes far to undo a long alliance. The situation becomes grave, and peace doubtful. Then England has no friend but France to help her keep open the route to India. She quarrels with her nearest neighbor and her only friend in Europe.

ITALY AND THE WAR.

Demonstrations in Florence and Other Places in Favor of Prussia—Extent of the Hostility to France—Policy of the Government—The Pope and Infallibility—Movements of Garibaldi.

From Our Own Correspondent.

FLORENCE, Wednesday, July 20, 1870.

Except the interminable question of Italian finance, here every other subject of discussion is put aside, and public attention is wholly directed to the war. As soon as it was known that hostilities had been declared by France, a movement was observed which served to show in what direction the current of popular feeling was set. Papers were posted up about the town calling upon the people to meet in the Square of the Cathedral to express sympathy for Prussia, and condemn the course of France in resorting to war. Several thousand people met and moved through the principal streets, led off by a man carrying the Italian flag. A halt was made before the office of the Minister of Foreign Affairs, and a call made for a declaration of intentions. But no voice was heard, nor did any official personage show head or hand. An ardent lady, with the title of Roman Countess, who has several times fluttered in a political gale, mounted the steps of the Palazzo Vecchio and harangued the crowd as it passed, in opposition to the Emperor NAPOLEON and in favor of an advance on Rome. The procession then moved toward the residence of the Minister of Prussia, and shouts of sympathy were raised for the cause of Germany. Next came the turn of the representatives of France, and the crowd set its head in the direction of the Legation with the intention of giving, with groans and menaces, proofs of disapprobation. But the authority had taken the precaution to draw out in line a company of regulars, at the sight of which the crowd turned tail and went in another direction. A little while after, gathering courage, it presented itself before the Central Office of the Questura, and attempted to force its way through the military line. Here, for the first time, it received the legal intimation to disperse, and without waiting for extreme measures, the procession broke up. A policeman stabbed in the abdomen was the only act of violence.

THE HOSTILITY TO FRANCE.

Similar demonstrations have taken place at Turin and Milan. The central authority has given notice to its subordinates in different parts of the Kingdom, not to permit them in future, as such manifestations are uncalled for, impolitic, and only lead to evil; while they cannot influence the Government, they are but acts of a petulent and sterile hostility. They are directed against France on account of the continued occupation of Rome. But it is difficult to conceive of any great change in the conduct or policy of France toward Italy or Rome, except in case of a succession of disasters to French arms. The withdrawal of the troops and the flag of France from Italian territory, would be barren of practical results if the Italians afterward were not permitted to occupy Rome—a purpose which, there is, unfortunately, too much reason to believe, has not yet entered the head of the French Emperor. If France wins in the impending conflict, there is every reason to suppose that she will impose her will with more firmness than ever upon Italy, as well as upon Central Europe.

POLICY OF THE GOVERNMENT.

In Parliament, yesterday, the Ministers were again asked, by a formal interpellation, what the Government has done, or proposes to do, under actual circumstances. A demand was made for correspondence to be presented to the Chamber. Both the President of the King's Council and the Minister of Foreign Affairs made reply to the same effect as before—that to present correspondence, or make revelations, would be both premature and perilous, and that the policy of the Government is still that of expectation. A few weeks' time, and two or three great battles may change the condition of all Europe, and nations not yet pledged may be drawn into the strife, and it may assume widest proportions. The order was given, yesterday, by the Minister, for the class of 1844 and 1845, on unlimited leave, to appear under arms, which will add about fifty thousand men to the present effective force of the army. A rather weak armed neutrality will be the position which Italy will try to maintain. All sorts of rumors have been afloat as to the intentions of the Ministry, the most important of which is that it intended to resign, but it is pro bable that there will be no change of importance in its organization.

THE INFALLIBILITY SCHEME.

As you already know, the infallibility scheme has been voted by the Council and proclaimed as a law of the Church. Not the slightest attention was paid to the intelligence when it was published here. The public was long ago prepared for this decision of the Council, which has changed nothing, and will be likely to do little to help Rome in the Kingdom of Italy. There has been, since the vote was taken, hardly an article in the journals upon the subject, so completely is attention taken up with the war. I am sorry to observe that the priests seem to be happy that France and Prussia are in conflict, for they believe that Gallicanism and Lutherism, which they equally hate, are to punish each other.

TROUBLE IN PROSPECT.

There has been a good deal of wrangling in Parliament the past week. The Ministry is teased with the fault-finding of a turbulent opposition, and the trial of its patience is carried almost to the limit of impertinence. Speculations are indulged among Deputies and the general public upon the issues which a few weeks are to evolve; but never had conjecture less ground of assurance upon which to base calculations of positive results. It is currently reported that GARIBALDI has left his island, and is ready to help direct the storm which his antagonist, the French Emperor, has raised.

ANGELICO.

It is related of the Empress EUGENIE, that on her return from Cherbourg, at dinner at St. Cloud, she surprised all present by proposing a toast. The fortunate mortal thus honored was no other than M. THIERS. The assembled guests could not believe their ears. Her Majesty condescended to explain: "To M. THIERS, to whom we are indebted for the fortifications of Paris, a work which now enables us to send to the frontier 100,000 men who otherwise could not have been spared."

EUROPEAN MAIL NEWS.

ARRIVAL OF THE STEAMSHIP CHINA.

The steam-ship China, from Liverpool July 30 and Queenstown July 31, arrived at this port yesterday. She brings two days later news than that brought by the City of London.

The London Daily News remarks: "The British yachting world have every right and reason to rejoice in the well-won victory of the Cambria over her gallant American antagonist, the Dauntless. For our own part, we must confess that we are most agreeably surprised. It must have been a wonderfully well-sailed and well-contested race on both sides, seeing that over a course of nearly three thousand miles the match was won by one hour and a quarter only. It was, we believe, the general impression among English yachtsmen that the Cambria would be overpowered by the Dauntless; yet, while both appear to have had an equal share of gales as well as calms, the little Cambria was the first to pass Sandy Hook. It will excite even more than the expected interest in the trials of the Cambria against the crack craft in American waters, in which we hope Mr. ASHBURY may prove equally successful, and return with the challenge cup of the America."

The charge of scuttling a ship, in which the accused are HECTOR GILLIES, ship-owner, and JOHN FITZGERALD, master mariner, already noticed, was continued at the Mansion House, London, July 28. The defendants are charged with scuttling the ship Admiral Napier, with the view to defraud the Azienda Insurance Association of Trieste of £600, for which the ship was insured. JOHN GORDON, who was mate of the ship when a former witness, SOMERVILLE, was the Captain, deposed to the details of a conversation he heard between GILLIES and SOMERVILLE about getting rid of the vessel, which led him to leave her, and give information to Capt. DOUNWARD, who instituted the present prosecution. The witness' evidence confirmed that which had been given by SOMERVILLE, as to the offer of £20 made to him by GILLIES to lose the ship. The next witness, JAMES RUDDY, of Gravesend, stated that he was mate of the ship from Dublin to Liverpool, and from thence to Aberdeen. On the 7th of June the witness discovered a leakage near the Master's cabin. The Captain, however, made no effort to have it stopped, and told the witness not to meddle with it, for fear he should make it worse. The Captain might, the witness said, easily have run the ship on shore, but he made no effort to do so. The ship went down head foremost, and the crew were landed at Lamlash. They saved some tools, among which was a large auger, which the Captain threw overboard. At Lamlash the witness quarreled with GILLIES, and told him that the ship had not been lawfully lost. Evidence confirmatory of several of these statements was given by WILLIAM LACY, one of the sailors, by two of the boys, and the case was remanded to the 5th of August.

On the morning of July 25, says a London paper, the corvette Fethi Bulend, or Great Victory, constructed from the designs of Mr. REED, and armed with four 12½ ton Armstrong guns, was lying in the docks of the Thames Iron-works Company. She had been built for the service of His Imperial Majesty, the Sultan, whose agent was on board. Certain prudential reasons induced the Thames Iron-works Company to place two of its own agents also on board; in short, although the greater portion of the price had been paid, a large sum was still owing, and the Company meant to be paid in full before parting with the vessel. Suddenly, on Thursday afternoon, the Fethi Bulend was seized, carried out into the river, the Company's agents being helpless, and was seen making as fast as steam could drive her, for the sea. The Company cannot be accused of unnecessary delay in protecting its own interests. The corvette was seized at 3 P. M., and before Vice-Chancellor MALINS rose, Mr. GLASSE, Q. C., was moving for an injunction to restrain the agent of the Turkish Government from taking the Fethi Bulend out of the jurisdiction of the Court. The injunction was granted, and the vessel may now be seized wherever she may be found in British waters, it being supposed that she has not coal enough on board to exempt her from the necessity of putting into port. The commercial part of the affair will no doubt be satisfactorily explained on behalf of the Turkish Government in due time, and will probably resolve itself into a question of contract or disputed account.

The London Times, of July 30, relates the following: "An account reached us on Tuesday—which, however, we hesitated to publish until we had ascertained its authenticity—of a fatal accident which happened on Wednesday night to a lady named SAUNDERS, wife of a Biarritz banker, one of a party staying on board Lord CLAUD HAMILTON'S yacht, which has been lying off Littlehampton during the Goodwood Races. After the party had returned from Goodwood on Wednesday evening they had some amusements on board the yacht, and at 12 o'clock his Lordship, with two sailors and Mrs. SAUNDERS, appears to have left the yacht in a boat for the purpose of going outside the harbor to let off fireworks. The boat went toward the mouth of the harbor with a sail set, and before she got clear of the harbor works capsized. One of the sailors swam to a post near, and supported himself until the falling tide enabled him to get ashore. Another clung to the boat, and Lord CLAUD, who is an excellent swimmer, supported the lady. Finding himself at length unable to continue his support, he swam with her to a post, and telling her to hold on, he returned to the boat. Afterward he again went to the lady's assistance, seeing she was in a distressed state, but her struggles were so violent that he was compelled to leave her, and she soon afterward let go the post and sank with a piercing shriek. Lord CLAUD HAMILTON then swam again to the boat, and the two drifted out to sea. At about 2 o'clock the occurrence at last became known, through a pile driver who was going early to his work. A boat was at once manned, and put to sea in search of his lordship and the sailor. They were discovered near the Black Ruby, a long distance out. The sailor was on the bottom of the boat, holding on to the keel with one hand, and grasping with the other the hand of Lord CLAUD HAMILTON. The latter was nearly exhausted, and a few moments more must have sealed his fate. He was brought ashore, and it is believed he will not be much the worse for his melancholy adventure. The body of the lady is being sought for.

GREAT BRITAIN.

Mr. Charles Dickens' Will—"The Pride Which Apes Humility."

From the Saturday Review.

Mr. DICKENS' will stands on different grounds, and as the world's judgment has been invoked on its merits, we must say that it strikes us as being rather a painful document. The natural reluctance to say this is diminished by the fact that the will was written to the world. Mr. DICKENS' last charge to mankind is of the nature of a solemn rescript, urbi et orbi, quite as much as a testamentary document. It is a pièce justificative; which implies that there is something to justify. It is not the first time that Mr. DICKENS has invited the whole world to survey his private and domestic concerns. His will is the complement of that strange document which Mr. DICKENS published—and which Messrs. BRADBURY & EVANS would not allow to be published in a periodical of which he was editor and they were proprietors—when he separated from his wife. As to the rights or wrongs of that separation, or rather of what led to it, we pronounce no judgment, because we have no means of forming a judgment. Anyhow the incident furnished a remarkable absence of good taste and, as most people thought, of good feeling, and all on one side. Mr. DICKENS paraded his domestic life to the world; Mrs. DICKENS from that day to this has kept a modest and creditable silence. That Mr. Dickens had wrongs we shall neither deny nor affirm; that Mrs. DICKENS had none, it would be hard to believe. One wrong she certainly had: she was assailed by her husband in public. Mr. DICKENS might have had justice all on his side; we do not say that he had not; but generosity on that occasion he did not display. And generosity he has not displayed in his dying testament. With the worst taste, Mr. DICKENS, when in the vigor of life, affronted his wife by making his married life public property; and dying, he has repeated the wrong and the offense. Profuse and unctuous and stilted in his expressions of gratitude to his wife's sister, liberal in the provision that he has made for that lady, not forgetful of another lady, he has reduced his wife's income by one-half after his death, with something of a self-laudatory announcement that he has already been far too generous to her during his life. He leaves to his wife, as an annuity, the interest of £8,000, coupled with the boastful reminder that he has since their separation allowed her £600 a year. We hardly call this "brave" or "earnest." If Mr. DICKENS had been annoyed by his wife's temper, or lack of sympathy with his noble nature, some lingering touch of the human kindness of which we are told that he is the evangelist might have warmed his heart or his pen when he came to speak of the mother of his children with the words of a dying man. His heart might be all charity and all love to the whole human race, but it was chilly enough to one dispossessed lady, that lady his own wife—who, whether she has wrongs or sorrows, at least kept them to herself. To Miss TERNAN and Miss HOGARTH Mr. DICKENS very likely has duties, and he has cheerfully recognized them by word and deed. Are we to believe that all his duties to his wife were summed up by giving her an annuity without a single word of recognition, or if it were needed, of forgiveness and reconciliation? After saying this, which only a sense of duty, stimulated by the provocation offered by Mr. DICKENS' worshipers, has extorted from us, we shall not waste our time in exposing the bad taste of what the illustrious testator inserts in his will about his funeral. The ostentation of unostentatiousness is as offensive as the display of the most exaggerated love of posthumous honors, and expensive obsequies, and among the social vices which Mr. DICKENS' works have exposed, the pride which apes humility is rather curiously illustrated in his death.

Death of Hon. F. Charteris—Verdict of the Coroner's Jury.

The English papers announce the death of Hon. F. CHARTERIS, a son of Lord ELCHO, from a wound received in a somewhat mysterious way, already set forth in the TIMES. Mr. CHARTERIS was twenty-six years of age when he died. On the 20th ult. an inquest was held at the St. James' Vestry-hall, Piccadilly, on the body. The jury viewed the body, which lay at No. 23 St. James-place, the private residence of Lord ELCHO. Upon the return of the jury Lieut.-Col. RICHARD CHARTERIS said the deceased was his nephew, and the eldest son of Lord ELCHO. On the 22d witness went to him in his room, and found him lying on the floor upon his back. There was a wound in his head. Witness asked him if he knew him, and to press his hand if he did, and he pressed his hand. He died on Thursday at 12:20 o'clock. THOMAS SKILLET, valet at Lord ELCHO'S, deposed that on the morning of the 22d inst. he took the deceased his breakfast upstairs. That was about 9 o'clock, and at 10 the deceased asked for a newspaper, which witness took to him. The deceased was in the library at the time, and shortly afterward witness was told by the house-maid that she had heard groans there. Upon going into the library he found the deceased lying on his back, and in a water-closet near witness discovered a revolver which had been discharged. He had previously seen the pistol in a glass case in the deceased's bedroom on the third floor. Mr. WALTER COULSON, surgeon, of St. James' place, deposed that he saw the deceased lying upon his back on the floor in the library; the left arm of the deceased was under his body; there was a wound on the left orbit, above the left eye; witness at once sent for Sir WM. FERGUSSON; the wound was then probed, and it was found that a bullet had penetrated through the skull into the substance of the brain; there was no sign of powder about the face. In the case of suicides the pistol is generally held close to the head, and, therefore, in the majority of those cases powder-marks were found on the face. Surgeon-Major WYATT, of the Coldstream Guards, deposed that the deceased was a friend of his. He was in the habit of carrying a revolver about him when he was traveling. Latterly he had been in ill health, and he suffered from dimness of eyesight. He told witness a few days before the Wimbledon review that he intended to go to the French war, as he thought it would do him a great deal of good. Witness had examined the wound, and he believed it was the result of the accidental going off of the revolver. The deceased, although he was unwell, was in good spirits. The jury, after a short deliberation, returned a verdict of "Accidental death by the discharge of a pistol in the deceased's own hand." The remains of the deceased will be conveyed to Scotland for interment.

Export of Coal and Horses from England—The Coal Question in Parliament—How Prussia Views It.

In the British House of Commons, July 28, the question of the export of coal was introduced.

Mr. GOURLEY asked whether the export of English coal in British or other neutral vessels by British subjects to either France or Prussia would be a violation of Her Majesty's Proclamation against the export of articles contraband of war; and to what Prize Courts exporters of steam coal and owners of ships carrying the same would be amenable when trading to non blockaded ports.

The Attorney-General said that her Majesty's

A father and daughter, who had been separated for twenty years, were recently reunited at Marysville, Mo. GEORGE CHAFF, a mill-operative of Connecticut, stopped, a few days since, to compliment a young girl upon her appearance. Her lover coming up at the moment struck him in the head and knocked him insensible. In future GEORGE will probably be more careful and not attempt to "chaff" young girls when their lovers are in sight.

A lady named ESTHER FAUGANZA, formerly a resident of Dutchess County, N. Y., recently deceased, had been afflicted with a large ovarian tumor for upward of thirteen years. About two years ago she underwent the process of tapping. Six pints of water were drawn from her the first time, and since then eighty pails. After death a tumor was extracted weighing thirty pounds.

Two young cavaliers of Utica, N. Y., stimulated by the influence of Cupid and Bacchus, started on a serenading expedition, the other night, with a violin and harp. They played and sung industriously until morning, when they were pursued by three big brothers, and beaten in a most unmerciful manner with paving stones and other missiles. The troubadour system is evidently not in harmony with the feelings of "pent-up Uticans."

Another case of death from an overdose of opium has been reported. The victim in this instance was Rev. W. A. CHALYBAUS, a clergyman of the Lutheran Church at Liverpool, N. Y., who had only recently arrived in the country. As soon as war had been declared between France and Prussia he became restive, and showed such a desire to obtain news that he partially lost his reason, and took to beer and opium drinking. He also suffered from the cold treatment of a young lady to whom he had been engaged.

At the session of the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania, to be held in September next, the Danville, Hazleton and Wilkesbarre Railroad Company will be compelled to show by what warrant they claim to be a body politic and corporate, and to construct and maintain a railroad. The proceedings are commenced by the Attorney-General, in compliance with a joint resolution of the Legislature, for the protection of the rights of corporations chartered by the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, against corporations constructing lines within the State without authority of law. The result is looked forward to with much interest.

The San Francisco Call, in an article of a recent date, takes the side of those who are opposed to the freight system inaugurated by the Central Pacific Railroad Company. It thinks that matters are arranged so as to benefit the trade of Chicago to the detriment of trade on the Pacific coast. Wool, for instance, can be shipped by railroad nearly three thousand miles toward the New-York or other markets at two cents per pound, currency, while the California merchants, who desire to compete with Chicago, are compelled to pay a larger sum, in gold, to Salt Lake and way stations.

Under the head of "The New Insanity," the Galesburg Liberal, one of the sharpest and best edited of the Illinois weeklies, proceeds to deal with the question of woman's rights in a very vigorous manner, taking the ground that women have an indirect enjoyment of wealth gained in every way, from house-breaking to manslaughter. The writer concludes as follows: "Will you, as the harmless and amiable sheep, consent to make these sharp-clawed, charming wolves, our future rulers? And you, the newly ensnared, sleeping in fancied security, will you sharpen the teeth of the so-called "gentle" being by your side, only that she may chew you to death in a moment of temporary insanity." The editors of this paper are Mr. STEPHE R. SMITH and Rev. GEO. H. BEECHER, the latter a nephew of Rev. HENRY WARD BEECHER.

The time-honored monotony which prevails at Lewiston, Me., was unceremoniously disturbed a few days since by a violent onslaught made upon a man named CHARLES D. BELL, by a fellow-citizen named CROSS. Mr. CROSS claims to have suffered severely in mind, body and estate, from an attempt on the part of Mr. BELL to possess himself of his, CROSS', wife. Mr. BELL was promenading the principal thoroughfare with the wife of Mr. CROSS, when the latter jumped out of a store and struck him so heavily that he fell upon the sidewalk insensible.

A very interesting case of Enoch Arden-ism has just transpired at Rock Island, Ill., resulting in the reunion of two hearts and souls that had been separated for nineteen years. The hero of the romance emigrated from Ohio to California a short time after marriage with a pretty little maiden of the former State. For a year or two he wrote to her regularly, but then followed a season of suspense, and she did not hear from him for ten years. She removed her residence to Rock Island, and was finally persuaded to procure a divorce and marry an old friend, who treated her with great cruelty. A few days ago the first husband returned from the Pacific Slope, sought her out, and without the formality of another divorce, carried her off bag and baggage, toward the Rocky Mountains. Husband No. 2 seized the furniture and was content.

Y., $2,500; Merchants', Providence, $2,500; North American, Hartford, $2,500; City, Hartford, $2,500; Fire Association, Philadelphia, $2,500; Franklin, Philadelphia, $2,500; Merchants', Philadelphia, $2,500; Total, $47,500.

Yellow Fever at Philadelphia—Death of Several Persons from the Disease.

From the Philadelphia Telegraph, Aug. 9.

The citizens of the south-eastern portion of the city have been thrown into a state of great alarm by a rumor that several deaths had occurred recently at the Lazaretto from yellow fever. On inquiry it has been found that the rumor was true, but there is some consolation in learning that the disease has abated, and that since day before yesterday no deaths have occurred. Those still suffering with the malady are reported to the Health authorities this morning as being in an improving condition. The disease was brought here by the bark Home, from Black River, Kingston, Jamaica. She arrived off the Quarantine on the 29th of June last, with a cargo of logwood. It being reported to the officers stationed at that post that her commander, Capt. PHILLIPS, had died of a malignant fever on the passage, the vessel was brought to and examined. She was found to be in a perfectly filthy condition, and in addition to this a lot of loathsome rags were packed away in the hold. These were taken to the Quarantine wharf, where the match was applied, and in a short time nothing but cinders were left. While this was being done the cargo was taken out and brought up Windmill Island, where it now lies. Shortly after the destruction of the rags, the children of JACOB PEPPER, the keeper of the hotel adjacent to the station, were taken down with a fever, from which they all recovered. Mrs. ENOS, the mother-in-law of Mr. PEPPER, was also taken sick, and, after having shown every symptom of yellow fever, died during the early part of last week. The servant girl in the same family, after having exhibited prominent symptoms of the same disease, was taken to the residence of some of her relatives near Darby, where she expired. Mr. PEPPER himself was the next victim, and died on Sunday last. Mrs. MARY JOHNSON, a sister-in-law of the deceased, is now in bed, suffering with the fever. Mrs. MARY KUGLER, wife of the steward of the Quarantine, was also laid up, and in a short time died. Dr. THOMPSON, the physician in charge of the Quarantine, after working energetically to prevent the spread of disease, is also now laid up. Pilot J. BENNETT, of Cape May, after lying a few days in this city, died. — GRIFFITHS, second mate of the Home, and two of her crew, also expired in the built-up portion of Philadelphia. — DOGGAT, Captain of one of the lighters which carried the cargo to Windmill Island, died at Port Carbon, and his wife and a son fell victims to the malady at the Lazaretto.

The Home, on being cleaned and fumigated came up to the city during the latter part of the week, but the Health Officer directed her return to Quarantine, where she is now anchored. The Health Officer is actively engaged in investigating whether there are any other cases in the city, so that they may be removed to the Municipal Hospital, and the buildings they have been occupying fumigated.

The Building Accidents at Montreal—Disagreement of the Coroner's Jury.

The Montreal Witness of the 8th inst., says The inquiry into the cause of the death of two workmen at BARRON'S buildings last week, terminated on Sunday without the jury having found a unanimous verdict. Five out of the thirteen jurymen signed a verdict for accidental death, while the majority, among whom was the chairman, found one of manslaughter against the mason contractors, Messrs. PLANTE & BOURGOIN We think the public will agree that the latter is the correct conclusion. To say that the catastrophe was pure accident, seems absurd, and such a verdict is utterly untenable from the evidence. The accident was due to causes which were foreseen, but which the contractors failed to guard against, or effectually to see that others guarded against. They were aware that the joists ought to have been secured, and, one of the contractors, Mr. BOURGOIN, seems to have shown some anxiety about this, but failed to see it done. The consequence of this remissness was that the joists were left without any securing, either from being bricked, or braced with St. Andrew's crosses. A winch was placed over this unstable foundation, the tug of raising a large stone came, the winch was drawn a little to one hand, the joists, in consequence, rolled over to their flat, or weak side, and workmen, winch, stone, platform and all dropped into the foundation beneath; two of the workmen being taken out dead, and three dangerously hurt, one of whom died shortly after.

REAL ESTATE TRANSACTIONS.

At the Exchange yesterday the attendance was quite large, and an extensive sale of Westchester County property took place under the direction of JAMES M. MILLER, auctioneer. The bidding was active and the price realized for the lots above the average. The result of the sale showed that when desirable property is offered buyers will present themselves, no matter how dull the market may be. The following is a brief statement of the transactions, full details of which, as to size and location, will be found in the summary. Eight lots at Inwood brought $1,250 each, one plot of ground at Tremont, containing five city lots, was sold for $2,100, and three plots at West Morrisania, each comprising four full-sized city lots, were disposed of for $5,350, $3,600 and $4,700 respectively. The transaction was a trustee's sale made to close up an estate.

The sale of leasehold property on Eighth-street, 185 feet east of Broadway, which was advertised for yesterday by ROBERTS & MCGUIRE was postponed to a day not named.

The sale by JOHNSON & MILLER at New-Brunswick, N. J., yesterday, was largely attended, notwithstanding the threatening state of the weather, and was highly successful. A special train of eight cars, which were filled to repletion, left the City at 11 o'clock. There were 1,500 persons on the ground, and 242 lots were sold for the aggregate sum of $25,680, when the sale was interrupted by a heavy shower. The bidding was spirited, and the competition active. Before the auctioneers left the ground they collected deposits from all the purchasers, who were eager to buy more property. Offers were made for large parcels, after the sale was over, by those who were familiar with the locality and appreciated its advantages.

IMPORTANT PEREMPTORY SALE
BY AUCTION OF
900 BUILDING LOTS AND PLOTS
IN THE CITY OF SCRANTON, PENN.,

On TUESDAY, Aug. 16, at 10 o'clock, on the premises, at Scranton, by LAWRENCE, OAKLEY & FLEURY.

Nine hundred beautifully-located building lots, of 22 to 26 feet 6 inches front by 150 to 160 feet in depth, on avenues 80 feet in width, each lot having a back outlet on street 20 feet wide.

These lots form the most beautiful portion of the city plot, gradually rising in slope several hundred feet, giving superb views from each of the blocks of many miles in extent.

For salubrity, beauty of its buildings, width of its avenues, together with its business and social advantages, Scranton offers rare inducements. From a population of about ten thousand twelve years ago, it now numbers upward of sixty thousand persons.

A mountain stream of large volume crosses the property at an elevation sufficient to supply abundantly all the city with the purest water for domestic or steam purposes.

The particular attention of manufacturers and others is invited to this rare opportunity for profitable investment. Coal can be had for about fifty cents per ton, and raw material and provisions at the lowest figures. Four or five trunk railroads centre here, being only four or five hours from New-York.

Terms of sale half cash, balance on liberal time, if desired, at six per cent. interest. Nuisances interdicted.

Further particulars at sale.

FINANCIAL.

LAKE SHORE
AND
MICHIGAN SOUTHERN RAILWAY COMPANY
SEVEN PER CENT.
Consolidated Mortgage Sinking Fund Bonds.

The Lake Shore and Michigan Southern Railway Company, for the purpose of providing for the payment of its several mortgage debts as they become due, has executed a mortgage to the Union Trust Company, of New-York, as Trustee, upon the whole of its Railroad and branches, payable on the first day of July, in the year one thousand nine hundred.

COUPON BONDS of $1,000 each will be issued, with interest at Seven per centum per annum, payable semi-annually, on the first day of January and July, in each year, and REGISTERED BONDS of $1,000, $5,000 and $10,000 each, without coupons, with interest at Seven per centum per annum, payable quarterly, on the first day of January, April, July and October, in each year, principal and interest payable at the office of the Union Trust Company in New-York.

We call the attention of investors especially to this class of REGISTERED BONDS, which, on account of the SECURITY AFFORDED AGAINST LOSS BY ROBBERY, FIRE OR OTHERWISE AND THE PAYMENT OF QUARTERLY INTEREST, offer an investment peculiarly desirable.

A limited amount of these bonds can be purchased at 97½, and accrued interest, upon application to

NO. 18 BROAD-ST.

Alabama 8 per Cent.
GOLD BONDS,
FREE OF ALL TAXES,
THE FIRST MORTGAGE BONDS
OF
THE SOUTH AND NORTH ALABAMA RAILROAD COMPANY.

Guaranteed by the State of Alabama, in American gold, and secured by first mortgage of $25,000 a mile to JAMES BUELL and V. K. STEVENSON, Trustees, which mortgage has been examined and approved by Messrs. EVARTS, SOUTHMAYD & CHOATE, of New-York, upon the road, franchises, depots, lands and other property of every kind, in addition to the indorsement of the State of Alabama, which can only be had as the road is finished, equipped and received by the State Engineer as a first-class road and outfit. 80 MILES of which have been finished, equipped, and so received.

The State of Alabama, in ordering the indorsement of these Bonds, specially provides for the prompt payment of principal and interest of the same in case the Company should fail to do so.

This is a south and north road from the City of Montgomery, 183 miles long to Decatur, on the Tennessee River, in DIRECT line north by Nashville, Louisville and Cincinnati to the lakes.

The stock paid up and property mortgaged to secure the payment of these Bonds and interest is $3,500,000, which, with the indorsement of the State of Alabama, and the high rate of interest, makes THE BEST INVESTMENT NOW OFFERED.

A limited number of these Bonds are for sale at 95 and accrued interest, by Messrs.

WASHINGTON.

Purchases of Indian Supplies—The Bidders—Reorganization of the War Department—Extensive Seizure of Highwines in New-York—Condition of the South.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Aug. 9.—Commissioner PARKER arrived here today, having completed his annual purchases of Indian supplies. The entire amount of awards is between $450,000 and $500,000. There were a large number of bidders, and the prices paid average about twenty-five per cent. lower than last year. None but samples of the best quality have been accepted. Gen PARKER, this year, adopted the plan of considering separately the bid for each item in the schedules, and this change from the system heretofore pursued was found to work greatly to the advantage of the Government. The largest single award for about $100,000 worth of blankets was given to the manufacturers in Philadelphia. A. T. STEWART and H. B. CLAFLIN were among the competitors bidding to supply dry-goods, and the largest amount in this line, aggregating some $60,000, was awarded to CLAFLIN & Co. The Indian Commission, with the exception of Mr. TOBEY and Gov. FARWELL, were present, assisting the Commissioner in making his purchases. Gen. PARKER will return to New-York to-morrow, and will be occupied until about the 1st of September in inspecting the goods furnished to see whether they compare with the samples, and superintending their shipment to the different tribes. The goods will make about sixty car-loads. Mr. VINCENT COLYER, who has just been reappointed a member of the Indian Peace Commission, in pursuance of the act of Congress which requires that the Secretary of the Commission shall be one of its members, has been designated to proceed to Southern Kansas to confer with the chiefs of the Osage tribe, and ascertain whether they desire to avail themselves of the provisions of the law enacted last session, which leaves it optional with them to remove to another reservation and sell the lands they now occupy.

THE WAR DEPARTMENT.

The Secretary of War is having a thorough examination made into the manner in which business is done in his Department. Some of his subordinates think they are short of clerical force; but he is of the opinion that there are clerks enough in the office to do all the work if it reaches them in proper manner. His idea seems to be that there is too much red tape somewhere, and that a good deal of it can be dispensed with to the advantage of the public by a reorganization and readjustment.

SEIZURE OF HIGH WINES.

Notice was received at the Internal Revenue Bureau today of the seizure of over 6,400 gallons of highwines in the Thirty-second New-York District. Steps have been taken to prosecute the perpetrators of the frauds.

Dispatch to the Associated Press.

CONDITION OF THE SOUTH.

Attorney-General AKERMAN, in conversation, today, remarked that the condition of North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, and other States is deplorable, because, among other reasons, the Legislatures instead of paying strict attention to such business as would advance their material welfare and fully establish themselves in their former prosperity, have yielded to railroad and other lobbyists, and that legislative bodies which subject themselves to such influences are always exposed to unfavorable criticism; therefore there is urgent need of reform or wholesome reconstruction.

INSTRUCTIONS TO TOBACCO MANUFACTURERS.

Hereafter manufacturers of tobacco from scraps are prohibited from resorting to the sifting process in the manufacture of scraps, and must use the rake to separate that which is fit to be made into plug tobacco, and the remainder to be packed without further sifting, and marked with a label indicating its character as a navy scrap.

NEW ARMY BOARD.

The names of a new Army Board will be officially announced to-morrow. It will act upon applications of officers to be retired under the recent act of Congress. About 150 cases will be brought before the Board.

DEATH OF AN INDIAN CHIEF.

Gen. SULLY reports to the Department the death of VICTOR, head chief of the confederated Flathead nation, aged eighty-five years. This is a great loss to the Flatheads. In former years he was one of their greatest warriors, but many years ago he joined the Catholic Church, and ever since has been a devout Christian. Gen. SULLY says he does not know of any one among the Flatheads who can take his place and have the same influence over the nation.

PERSONAL.

Commissioner PARKER returned to Washington this morning.

German Contributions for the Disabled and the Bereaved.

The following list of contributions received by Mr. PHILLIP BISSINGER, the Treasurer of the German Patriotic Aid Society, of this City, is in addition to that previously published in the TIMES:

J., $100, and a large number of contributions from $75 downward. The total receipts of the Treasurer have been thus far $53,468,10. The Treasurer has distributed eighty-nine books among collectors, and subscriptions for the purposes of the Society are made liberally by the Germans of this City. At the last meeting of the Executive Committee of the Society, Mr. EMIL SAUER, President of the German-American Bank, south-east corner of Broadway and Cedar-street, was appointed acting Treasurer, in place of Mr. BISSINGER, who is at present indisposed. Mr. H. WILLARD, Secretary of the Social Science Association, of Boston, who intends to go to Germany shortly, has tendered the Society his services there free of charge. The Executive Committee voted him their thanks, and will decide about the acceptance of his offer at a future meeting. Dr. BARTELMESS and Mr. HAAS, both of the German Patriotic Aid Society, of Brooklyn, were admitted as members to the Executive Committee. Dr. H. VON HOLET, the Corresponding Secretary of this Committee, will attend the Convention of delegates from German Patriotic Aid Societies of this country, which will be held at Chicago, Ill., on the 18th inst.

Deputy Sheriff and City Marshal—A Conflict of Authorities.

On the 29th of July the City Marshal, JOHN C. LYST, executed an attachment for debt granted by the Seventh District Court, against the furniture-store formerly owned by J. EHLICK, in Third-avenue, between Fifty-second and Fifty-third streets, levying upon the property contained in the store, and taking possession. Having many other things to attend to, Marshal LYST took an inventory of the property seized, and put one of his men in charge of it.

On the 5th of the present month Deputy Sheriff DEMPSEY, under another attachment for debt, issued by the Court of Common Pleas, and dated, as Marshal LYST says, the 4th inst., during the absence of his man to dinner, forcibly entered the premises and took charge of the goods, on learning which Marshal LYST hastened to the scene. A wordy warfare ensued, Deputy Sheriff DEMPSEY contending that the rights of the Sheriff's attachment were supreme, and Marshal LYST asserting that the first used out and executed attachment should have precedence in a settlement of debts, as by law provided. Neither party would give in. But yesterday Marshal LYST, seizing his opportunity, made a raid on the premises with several of his men during the absence of the Deputy Sheriff, and, despite the angry talk of the Sheriff's guardian left in charge, broke open the locks put upon the doors by the Sheriff's orders, and putting peculiar "unopenable" locks in their stead, took forcible possession of the goods again. Marshal LYST yesterday informed a TIMES reporter that he had the goods, and would probably sell them at auction next week, Sheriff or no Sheriff.

YACHTING.

The Annual Cruises—Start of the New-York Fleet Today—List of the Vessels Which are to Sail.

Yesterday was the time appointed for the rendezvousing of the New-York Yacht Club squadron at Glen Cove, on Long Island Sound, in accordance with an order issued by Commodore H. G. STEBBINS, preparatory to going on the annual cruise. There was a large number of schooner yachts on hand, including Mr. DURANT'S Idler, Mr. FRANKLIN OSGOOD'S Magic, Mr. BAKER'S Rambler, Mr. KIDD'S Alice, Mr. GEO. A. OSGOOD'S Fleetwing, Mr. R. F. LOPER'S Madgie, Mr. KINGSLAND'S Alarm, Mr. BENNETT'S Dauntless, Mr. SMITH'S Halcyon, Mr. E. DODGE'S Silvie, Messrs. C. C. DODGE and HAVEN'S Widgeon, and Mr. BAKER'S Vesta. Mr. ASHBURY'S English yacht, the Cambria, and the famous America, belonging to the naval service, were also present by special invitation of the Club. Several sloop yachts joined the fleet during the day. A meeting of the yachtmen was held on shore in the afternoon, at which the programme of the cruise was arranged. It was decided to visit New-London, on the Sound, and from thence to proceed to Newport, stopping on the way at Greenport and Stonington. On leaving Newport the squadron will sail to New-Bedford and Martha's Vineyard, anchoring at the latter place in order to give the yacht owners and their guests an opportunity of visiting the camp-meeting, which is annually held there. Some of the vessels will run as far east as Boston, while others will not continue on the cruise further than Newport. Some slight changes may be made in the course during the cruise. The start will be made this morning from Glen Cove. A series of races will be held between the departure and the return of the fleet. The first one will probably take place off New-London, on Friday or Saturday, the prize being a valuable silver cup, presented by Mr. ASHBURY. Private matches have also been made between the Rambler, Phantom and Idler, together with some other yachts, all of which will be contested previous to the termination of the cruise. The Atlantic Yacht Club squadron, of Brooklyn, sailed from Glen Cove for New-London, yesterday. Today the various vessels belonging to the fleet will run to Greenport, on arriving at which place Commodore VOORHIS will announce the programme for Saturday and Sunday next. The yachts will be absent until the 24th inst. If both the New-York and Brooklyn squadrons should happen to meet at any point on the Sound, there will be a brilliant display of canvas, as they both together number upward of fifty vessels.

THE LATE RACE.

The official report has been given of the race held on Monday for the possession of the America cup, from which we obtain the following facts:

Time of startine, 11:28 A. M., from a line formed by the stake-boat anchored off the Club-house, Staten Island.

The yachts arrived at the home stake-boat in the following order: Magic, Dauntless, Idler, America, Phantom, Madgie, Silvie, Cambria, Fleetwing, Halcyon, Tarolinta, Madeleine, Calypso, Rambler, Alice.

After correcting for allowance of time in accordance with the rules of the Club, the following is the official report:

Name of Yacht.	Arrival at Home Stake-boat. H. M. S.	Actual Time of Making Race. H. M. S.	Corrected Time by Allowance H. M. S.
1. Magic	3 33 54	4 07 54	3 58 21.2

FUTURE CONTESTS BETWEEN THE NEW-YORK YACHTS AND THE CAMBRIA.

Another race is likely to come off in the Lower Bay between the yachts belonging to the New-York Club and the Cambria, before the departure of the latter for England. It is likely to take place in September, and may possibly be followed by other races. Mr. ASHBURY, the owner of the Cambria, has announced his intention of challenging the schooners which ran against his vessel on Monday to race him twenty miles, dead to windward and back, outside of Sandy Hook light-ship, or some other open course, on one or more occasions. He expresses his willingness to sail under the rules of any yacht club in his own country or in this, and thinks that such a race will settle the question of superiority of American vs. English yachts better than any number of races on the Thames, inside the Isle of Wight, across the Atlantic, or over the New-York Club's course. Mr. ASHBURY has also suggested that an entrance fee of £5 or £10 be paid by the owner of each yacht which raced on Monday, for the purpose of procuring a cup, to be presented to the owner of the Magic, in recognition of his great victory.

There is some talk about getting up a grand regatta among the schooners belonging to the Brooklyn Club, and of inviting the Cambria to enter into it. Several thousand dollars' worth of prizes will be offered in the hope of making it as brilliant as the race given by the New-York Club.

Last evening, about 8 o'clock, JOHN ROACH, or No. 802 Second-avenue, was accidentally shot by his daughter FANNY, sixteen years of age, while she was handling a pistol which her father had taken out for the purpose of shooting a vicious dog which infested the neighborhood. The wound being of a dangerous character, ROACH was taken to Bellevue Hospital, and soon afterward his daughter CAROLINE, eight years of age, was badly bitten by a ferocious dog belonging to ROACH. The child was taken to the Twenty-first Precinct Station-house, where her wounds were dressed. As a fitting close to these untoward events the dog was killed by Roundsman WOODRUFF, of the Nineteenth Precinct.

HERMAN RADENWADER was yesterday in the Yorkville Police Court, before Justice COULTER, charged with committing a rape upon MARY MARRICK, a good-looking and intelligent little girl of eleven years. The brute was committed without bail.

Sergeant MCCOMB and Officer FLEMMING, of the Twelfth Precinct, yesterday, about 2 o'clock, were informed that two boys had gone down to the coal-cellar of No. 628 Lexington-avenue, through the coal-hole in the side walk, the owner of the house being absent in the country. Descending to the cellar, they found one of the boys, MICHAEL WARD, who had been trying to open the door leading up from the cellar with a poker. WARD, who is about fourteen years of age, was committed.

Yesterday, in the Yorkville Police Court, before Justice COULTER, CATHARINE HARRON, residing at No. 982 Third-avenue, charged that she found JOHN WILLIAMS in her apartments about 1 o'clock yesterday morning. In his possession was found a gold breast-pin, a pair of ear-rings and a sleeve-button of the value of $25, belonging to Miss HARRON. The following property was also found in his possession: A silver watch, a chain, a ring, a gold sleeve-button, three ear-rings, a gold pen, two silver badges, a piece of gold chain and a broken ring, together with a chisel, a large knife and a bunch of skeleton keys. He was remanded for examination.

The funeral of Rev. JOHN STRANAHAN took place at St. Peter's R. C. Church, yesterday. There was a solemn requiem mass at 10½ o'clock A. M., Rev. Father O'FARRELL, celebrant; Rev. Father JAMES QUINN, deacon, and Rev. Father O'FARRELL, sub-deacon. Rev. Father O'FARRELL delivered the funeral discourse, and the remains were taken to the vault of St. Patrick's Cathedral.

Mr. HERMAN JAENUECKE, a photographer of this City, has painted a life-sized portrait, in oil, of the Prussian King WILLIAM, which is now on exhibition at the Atlantic Garden, in Bowery. The artist intends to present the painting to the German Patriotic Aid Society of this City, to be disposed of for the benefit of their funds.

In the six weeks from July 3 to Aug. 7, 1869, there were 3,826 deaths. This year, during the same corresponding period, there were 5,041, showing an increase of 1,215, an average of 200 a week for 1870. The cause of this may be directly traced to the heat. The thermometer ranges some ten degrees higher than it did last year at this time, and even now, at night, it is higher than it was then in the middle of the day, when the sun was hottest.

The St. Patrick's Mutual Aid Society, of this City, held a grand picnic at Funk's Union Park, Sixty-third-street and East River, yesterday afternoon and evening. There was an immense attendance. Mayor HALL made a funny speech, besides which there was music and dancing. A statue of DANIEL O'CONNELL was unveiled amid great enthusiasm. Considerable excitement was produced by the explosion of a kerosene lamp, which set fire to the building. The flames were quenched, however, before any serious injury was done.

The Chess contest between the champions of the Café International and the members of the Brooklyn Chess Club, terminated yesterday in favor of the New-York players. The conditions of the match were that thirty-six games should be played, and that either party winning nineteen should be the victors. After five evenings' play, New-York succeeded in scoring twenty-one games against eight games won by Brooklyn.

The annual excursion of the United Choirs of Trinity Parish will come off today. A steamer has been engaged which will convey about 200 of the party to Navesink Highlands, N. J., where there will be luncheon and dancing. Some good music is anticipated.

A large crowd assembled at the Cunard Dock, Jersey City, yesterday afternoon, to see JEFF. DAVIS, who was expected to sail in the Russia for Europe. They were disappointed, however. Mr. DAVIS gave them the slip and went aboard by means of a private conveyance.

The workmen employed in excavating a ditch on the east side of the City Hall Park, yesterday, struck a layer of human skeletons, supposed to be the victims of the cholera in 1832, who were buried in an old graveyard located in that vicinity.

A decision was rendered, yesterday, by Judge BLATCHFORD, in the case of JOHN JAGERS, who was brought up on a writ of habeas corpus, to test the right of the military authorities to detain him, he being, as alleged, a minor when he enlisted. The Judge remanded him to his regiment, he having sworn that he was of age when he entered the army.

O. S. MARTINAS and ANTHONY PEREZ were brought before Commissioner SHIELDS, yesterday, charged by W. W. APPLEGATE, of Col. WHITELY'S staff, with having sold 1,600 unstamped cigars on the 9th of August last, at the corner of Third-avenue and Twenty-seventh-street. They were held in $500 bail each for examination.

BROOKLYN.

The Children's Aid Society, in Poplar-street, sent a boy named HENRY KENNEDY to the West a few days since, on a forged application, written by a young man in a lawyer's office near the City Hall. The application was written at the request of the boy, and his absence caused his parents a great deal of uneasiness. As soon as his whereabouts was discovered, a telegram was sent to the parties having him in charge, and he will be brought back.

DANIEL POLHEMUS, a pawnbroker, who keeps an office in Fulton-street, was taken before Justice WALSH, yesterday, on a charge of receiving stolen goods. He had in his possession some goods which had been stolen from the dry-goods store of Mr. CARHART by some boys. The accused was held in the sum of $1,000 bail to answer on Friday.

BENNEY G. BINGHAM was arrested yesterday morning, on a charge of embezzlement, preferred by his employer, CHARLES H. BAKER, of the Dealers' Mutual Protection Agency, of Brooklyn, office No. 16 Court-street. The amount said to have been taken is $200. He will be tried on the 18th inst. He was employed as a collection agent.

PATRICK GRAHAM and BERNARD REILLY quarreled in Imlay-street at a late hour on Tuesday night, when the former drew a pocket-knife and stabbed the latter in the head, inflicting a severe though not dangerous wound. GRAHAM was arrested and locked up.

About 4 o'clock yesterday morning the saw factory of HARVEY PEASE, on Ainslie-street, near Tenth, E. D., was damaged to the extent of $5,000. Fully insured.

WESTCHESTER COUNTY.

The effect of locating the New-York and Boston Railroad along the line of the Saw-mill or Nepperham River, has been to create a wonderful demand for property in the vicinity of Ashford, about half way between Dobbs's Ferry, on the Hudson River, and Hart's Corners, on the Harlem Railroad. The latest sales of real estate there have been as follows: 28 acres of Mr. BASSETT'S farm, $8,000; Mr. BROWN'S farm, 15 acres, $9,000; Dr. HAMMOND'S farm, 25 acres, $20,000; Mrs. HALL'S farm, 85 acres, $22,000; W. & C. BUCKHOUT'S farm, 160 acres, $34,000; JOHN VINCENT'S hotel and farm, 100 acres, $60,000.

The Consistory of the Reformed Church of Mount Vernon, on Tuesday evening, awarded a contract to WM. LE ROY to erect the walls of their new house of worship on Fifth-avenue, in that village. The foundation walls are already erected. The material of the new church edifice will be white marble from Mr. MASTERSON'S quarry at Tuckahoe, and the work will be completed during the Fall.

The body of the young man found drowned some days ago at Hunt's Point, has been identified as that of PETER LAWRENCE, aged about seventeen years of age, who had been in the employ of Mr. WM. H. CORE, upholsterer, in Pearl-street.

The funeral of Mrs. BROWER, Mr. CORNELIUS COMBS'S mother, which took place from his residence near Mt. Vernon, on Tuesday, was very numerously attended, nearly eighty carriages filled with friends and acquaintances of the family being present. The remains of Mrs. BROWER were interred in Woodlawn Cemetery. The religious exercises at the house were very impressively conducted by Rev. Dr. HITCHCOCK, (Baptist,) of Brooklyn. The funeral services at the grave were performed by Rev. Mr. SEYMOUR, rector of Trinity parish, Mt. Vernon.

LONG ISLAND.

Five more warrants were issued, yesterday, for the arrest of members of the gang of youthful burglars in Long Island City, making sixteen in all, and the officers say they have not yet struck bottom. It now seems that the first arrest was the most important, as without doubt JAMES LOUGHLIN, one of the three first arrested, is the leader. The final examination will be deferred until the entire gang has been unearthed. None of the members are over twenty years of age, and all either lived at home or had some recognized means of support. Nearly every one that has been arrested has exposed some confederate. The following are the names of those arrested: James Loughlin, Adam Bloss, Peter Commisque, Wm. Hall, Thomas Loughlin, Charles Andrews, Frederick Flecher, Patrick Aucliff, Frederick Brennan, J. Slavin and J. Quigley. JAMES LOUGHLIN is out on $1,000, and most of the others on $500. It is expected that by the middle of next week all will have been arrested, when an examination can take place.

JOHN SMITH, the man who died Tuesday from a shot-wound received in an affray at Hunter's Point, Saturday, turns out to be one of the river thieves, who, while attempting to steal iron from the dock of the Long Island Railway, was shot by one of the hands.

JOHN HALARAN, PAT. HALARAN and WM. HALARAN were brought before Justice HAMILTON, at Flushing, yesterday, on a charge of cruelly beating a blind brother named CORNELIUS.

STATEN ISLAND.

The body of an unknown man, apparently about twenty-five years of age, was found floating near Stapleton, yesterday afternoon. The body was dressed in dark clothes, in the pockets of which was a small sum of money, but no papers that would lead to its identification. On the little finger of the left hand was an emerald ring, and in the shirt-bosom a handsome solitaire diamond pin. The body, which is supposed to be that of the man who fell overboard from the steamer Naushon on Tuesday, was taken in charge by the Coroner.

NEW-JERSEY.

Yesterday, at noon, a little child, ten months of age, living in North Second-street, Jersey City, and named JOHANNA RILLY, fell from a fourth story window to the roof of a two-story house, and then rolled to the ground. The child was picked up alive.

Mrs. AWL, living at No. 64 Canal-street, Jersey City, fell down-stairs on Tuesday, and broke both legs. She weighs 200 pounds, and her injuries are very severe.

The examination of BENJAMIN G. BRIGGS, the New-York auctioneer, who attempted to swindle ADOLF HULTNEYER and ALEXANDER BRUCE, of Jersey City, by means of a bogus note, was commenced by Recorder MARTINDALE, of Jersey City, yesterday morning. The prisoner was represented by a New York lawyer named RIALEY, who asked for an adjournment till today, which was granted, and the prisoner remanded into confinement. BRIGGS is also charged with committing assault and battery upon Mr. HULTNEYER, when he attempted to take possession of the store he had fraudulently purchased.

A portion of the stolen goods recently found by the Hoboken Police in the house of the BRUNKES, at Union Hill, has been identified as belonging to Mr. DAVID PARAMORE, of Englewood, N. J., who states that they were stolen from his store on the 2d of July. The thieves have been operating for a long time at Union Hill and vicinity, and by means of a light wagon and fast horse have always heretofore, succeeded in removing stolen property very quickly to a place of concealment.

Three saloon-keepers in Newark were victimized to the extent of $10 each on Tuesday by two men, who were passing counterfeit bills of the denomination on the First National Bank of Poughkeepsie, N. Y. Both have so far escaped detection. One of them had his nose flattened even with his face.

JOHN WICKHAM, of Belleville, had his pocket-book stolen from him while in a beer-saloon in Newark on Tuesday night. The pocket-book was afterward returned to him, but, as he says, minus $21. A warrant has been issued for the thief.

The young man, JAMES HENDERSON, who attempted to poison his mother, was examined yesterday morning before Justice CONKLIN, of Hoboken, but the matter was compromised by his paying his mother full wages for five months. He denied attempting to poison his mother.

The St. John's Union of Newark, enjoyed an excursion to Englewood, near Perth Amboy, on Tuesday. Four hundred persons joined in the entertainment, which was very enjoyable.

The funeral services of Hon. GEO. T. COBB and Mr. J. BOYD HEADLEY, who were killed at the recent railroad accident in Virginia, will be held in Morristown, N. J., on Saturday next.

A fire broke out in Bay-street, between Prospect and Grove streets, Jersey City, about 1 o'clock yesterday morning, destroying the stable of WM. TURNER. Two horses were also burned. The loss, all told, will not exceed $2,000, on which the Home Insurance Company, of New-York, had $300 insurance.

Dr. JAMES WARREN, of Newark, died at Madison, on Tuesday, and will be buried from the Park Church to-morrow morning.

The beer-brewers at Newark held their annual picnic at Roseville Park, yesterday. They filled twelve wagons, which were beautifully decorated, as they paraded the streets.

Mrs. MURT, living at No. 108 Essex-street, Jersey City, slipped on the sidewalk on Tuesday and broke one of her arms.

The most terrific thunder-storm that has been experienced in Trenton for fifteen years, passed over the city between 5 and 6 o'clock yesterday morning. The atmosphere seemed filled with electricity, the flashing of the lightning and the crashing of the thunder resembling a bombardment by an investing army, except that the heavenly artillery was ten-fold louder and more piercing than any number of batteries worked by human instrumentality. The lightning struck about the city in eight or ten different houses, but no very serious damage was done. Boards, brick and plastering were torn off, and pests and beams shivered into splinters, but not a house was set on fire, nor a single person killed. A man named THOMAS BRADEN was struck and severely cut in the face by flying pieces of brick and wood, and a Mrs. MOORE was stunned. A large number of trees and fifteen telegraph poles were struck, and more or less shattered.

Gov. RANDOLPH, of New-Jersey, has addressed a letter to the Mayor of Richmond, requesting him to furnish facilities to the gentlemen whom the Governor has sent to bring home from Greenbrier the remains of Hon. GEORGE V. COBB and Mr. J. BOYD HEADLEY. Messrs. E. HALSEY, J. BENTLEY and L. B. BUREN are the committee who are expected to return this (Thursday) morning.

At a meeting of the Passaic County Board of Freeholders held at Paterson, yesterday, the matter of the frauds which are claimed to have been perpetrated upon the county by members of the Board, was brought up and elicited lively and noisy discussion. It was charged that many thousands of dollars had been fraudulently taken from the county treasury, that Freeholders had used their official position to get contracts, and then enormously over-charged for the work done. Several members present were implicated. Freeholder SUTTON, as one instance, was charged with having received $200 for work never done at all. A resolution was passed by a vote of 8 to 6 to take legal measures for the recovery of the money lost, and to criminally prosecute the offenders. While the Board was still in session a bill of one BRADY for $36 95 for "wines, stews and cigars" furnished the old Board, was presented, in addition to a bill of $400 for the same items presented and paid some time since. Payment of the present bill was refused by a vote of 9 to 5.

A man named MICHAEL QUIGLEY was arrested yesterday morning, charged with robbing the farm-house of JAMES JOHNSON, near Trenton, on Tuesday night. Part of the stolen goods were found in his possession, and he was fully committed for trial.
